Chapter 1 - Sample Reading Comprehension and passage

Sample passage 1

In the philosophy of John Dewey, a sharp distinction is made between "intelligence" and "reasoning." According to Dewey, intelligence is the only absolute way to achieve a balance between realism, between practicality and wisdom of life. Intelligence involves "interacting with other things and knowing them," while reasoning is merely the act of an observer, "...a mind that beholds or grasps objects outside the world of things..." With reasoning, a level of mental certainty can be achieved, but it is through intelligence that control is taken of events that shape one's life.

1. What is the topic of this passage?

- A. The intelligence of John Dewey
- B. Distinctions made by John Dewey
- C. Dewey's ideas on the ability to reason
- D. How intelligence differs from reasoning in Dewey's works

Sample passage 2

Nitrogen fixation is a process by which nitrogen is continuously fed into biological circulation. In this process, certain algae and bacteria convert nitrogen into ammonia. This newly created ammonia is then for the most part, absorbed by plants.

The opposite process of nitrification returns nitrogen to the air. During the process of denitrification, bacteria cause some of the nitrates from the soil to convert into gaseous nitrogen or nitrous oxide. In this gaseous form the nitrogen returns to the atmosphere.

1. Which is the best topic of this passage?

- A. The process of nitrogen fixation.
- B. Two nitrogen processes
- C. The return of nitrogen to the air
- D. The effect of nitrogen on plant life

Sample passage 3

If asked who invented the game of baseball, most Americans would probably reply that it was Abner Doubleday. At the beginning of this century, there was some disagreement over how the game of baseball had actually originated, so sporting goods manufacturer Spaulding inaugurated a commission to research the question. In 1908 a report was published by the commission in which Abner Doubleday U.S., an army officer from Cooperstown, New York, was given credit for the invention of the game. The National Baseball hall of Fame was established in Cooperstown in honor of Doubleday.

Today, most sports historians are in agreement that Doubleday really did not have much to do with the development of baseball. Instead, baseball seems to be a close relation to the English game of rounder's and probably has English rather than American roots.

1. Recognize the organization of ideas - The second paragraph

- A. provides examples to support the ideas in first paragraph
- B. precedes the ideas in the first paragraph
- C. outlines the effects of the idea in the first paragraph
- D. refutes the idea in the first paragraph

Sample passage 4

Blood plasma is a clear, almost colorless liquid. It consists of blood cells having been removed. It is often used in transfusions because a patient generally needs the plasma portion of the blood more than the other components. Plasma differs in several important ways from whole blood. First of all, plasma can be mixed for all donors and does not have to be from the right blood group, as a whole blood does. In addition, plasma can be dried and stored, while whole blood cannot.

Finding "unstated" details

1. All of the following are true about blood plasma EXCEPT

- A. it is a deeply colored liquid
- B. blood cells have been taken out of it
- C. patients are often transfused with it
- D. it is generally more important to the patient than other parts of whole blood

2. Which of the following is not stated about whole blood?

- A. It is different from plasma
- B. It cannot be dried
- C. It is impossible to keep it in storage for a long time
- D. It is clear, colorless liquid.

Sample passage 5

The Hawaiian language is a melodious language in which all words are derived from the alphabet of only twelve letters, the five vowels A, E, I, O, U and the seven consonants H, K, L, M, N, P, W. Each syllable in the language ends in a vowel, and the two consonants never appear together, so vowels have a much higher frequency in the Hawaiian language than they do in English. The musical sounding language can be heard regularly by visitors to the islands. Most Hawaiians speak English, but it is quite common to hear English that is liberally spiced with words visitors may be greeted with the expressions from the traditional language of the culture. A visitor may be greeted with the expression aloha, and may be referred to as a malihini because he is newcomer to the island. This visitor may attend an outside la where everyone e much and be invited afterwards to a dance the hula.

1. Which of the following is probably NOT a Hawaiian word?

- A. mahalo
- B. mahimahi
- C. meklea
- D. moana

2. It is implied that a luau is

- A. a dance
- B. a feast
- C. a concert
- D. a language

Sample passage 6

When a strong earthquake occurs on the ocean floor rather than on land, tremendous force is exerted on the seawater and one or larger, destructive waves called tsunamis can be formed. Tsunami are commonly called tidal waves in the United States, but this is really an inappropriate name in that the cause of the tsunami is an underground earthquake rather than the ocean's tides.

Far from land, a tsunami can move through the wide open vastness of the ocean at a speed of 600 miles (900 kilometers) per hour and often can travel tremendous distances without losing height and strength. When a tsunami reaches shallow coastal water, it can reach a height of 100 feet (30 meters) or more and can cause tremendous flooding and damage to coastal areas.

1. The paragraph preceding the passage most probably discusses.

- A. tsunamis in various parts of the world
- B. the negative effects of tsunamis
- C. land-based earthquakes
- D. the effect of tides on tsunamis

2. Which of the following is most likely the topic of the paragraph following the passage?

- A. The causes of tsunamis
- B. The destructive effects of tsunamis on the coast
- C. The differences between tsunamis and tidal waves
- D. The distances covered by tsunamis

Sample passage 7

Ice ages, those periods when ice covered extensive areas of the Earth, are known to have occurred at least six times. Pastice ages can be recognized from the rock strata that show evidence of foreign materials deposited by moving walls of ice of melting glaciers. Ice ages can also be recognized sculpture landscapes, and polished rock surfaces.

1. According to the passage, what happens during an ice age?

- A. Rock strata are recognized by geologists
- B. Evidence of foreign materials are found
- C. Ice covers a large portion of the Earth's surface
- D. Ice melts six times

2. The passage covers how many different methods of recognizing past ice ages?

- A. one
- B. two
- C. three
- D. four

3. According to the passage, what in the rock strata is a clue to geologists of a past ice age?

- A. Ice
- B. Melting glaciers
- C. U-shaped valleys
- D. Substances from other areas

Sample passage 8

One of the leading schools of psychological thought in the twentieth century is Behaviorism, the belief that the role of the psychologist is to study behaviour, which is observable, rather than conscious or unconscious thought, which is not probably the best known proponent of behaviorism is B.F. Skinner, who is famous for his research on how rewards and punishments influence behaviour. He came to believe that the positive reinforcements such as praise, food, or money were more effective in promoting good behaviour than negative reinforcement, or punishment.

1. In "behaviorism" in line 1, a psychologist is concerned with

- A. conscious thought patterns
- B. unconscious thought patterns
- C. observable actions
- D. unobservable actions

Sample passage 10

A supernova occurs when all of the hydrogen in the core of a huge star is transformed to iron and explodes. All stars die after their nuclear fuel has been exhausted. Stars with little mass die gradually, but those with relatively large mass die in a sudden explosion, a supernova. The sudden flash of light can then be followed by several weeks of extremely bright light, perhaps as much light as twenty million stars. Supernovae are not very common: they occur about once every hundred years in any galaxy, and in 1987 a supernova mal could be seen by the naked eye occurred in the Magellan Cloud, a galaxy close to the Milky Way. Scientists periodically detect supernovae in other galaxies; however, no supernovae have occurred in the Milky Way on July 4, 1054. There was a great explosion followed by three months of lighted skies, and historical chronicles of the time were full of accounts and unusual explanations of the misunderstood phenomenon, many people believed that it meant that the world was coming to an end.

1. A "supernova" in line 1 is which of the following

A. The iron component of a star

C. The hydrogen in a star

2. According to the passage, which of the following best describes the "Magellan Cloud" in Line 6?

A. A galaxy inside the Milky Way

C. A galaxy near the Earth's galaxy

3. The "Milky Way" in line 8 is

A. part of the Earth

C. the galaxy that is home to the Earth

4. Which of the following is closest in meaning to "phenomenon" in line 10?

A. Everyday occurrence

C. Common belief

B. The core of a star

D. The explosion of a star

B. A cloud composed of hydrogen

D. A cloud in the sky above the Earth

B. a galaxy close to the Earth

D. a creamy-colored cloud in the sky

B. Misunderstood event

D. Unusual occurrence

Sample passage 11

The black widow is the most dangerous spider living in the United States. It is most common in the southern parts of the country, but it can be found throughout the country. The black widow got its name because the female has been known to kill the male after mating and, as a result, becomes a widow. The black widow is rather distinctive in appearance; it has a shiny globular body, the size and shape of a pea, and is marked on its underbelly with a red or yellow spot. The female is considerably more ample than the male, roughly four times larger on the average. If a human is bitten by a black widow, the spider's poison can cause severe illness and pain. Black widow bites have occasionally resulted in death, but it is certainly not the norm for black widow bites to be mortal.

1. In line 2 the word "widow" means

A. a type of poison

C. the human victim of the spider

B. the dead male spider

D. a female whose mate has died

B. Luminescent

C. Green in color

D. Round

3. The word "ample" in line 5 indicates that the spider is

A. feminine

B. large in size

C. dotted with colours

D. normal

4. Which of the following has the same meaning as the word "mortal" in line 8?

A. Deadly

B. Painful

C. Poisonous

D. Sickening

Sample passage 12

Detective glories tend to glorify crime. Murderers, gangsters and crooks all kinds are described as tough, cunning and courageous individuals who know how to take care of themselves and how to get what they want. In James McCain's The Postman Always Rings twice, for instance the villain is much more a impressive character than his victim. He is casual brave smart and successful with women. It is true that he finally gets caught. But he is punished for a crime that he did not commit, so that his conviction is hardly a triumph of justice. Besides, looking back over the exciting life of the criminal, the reader might conclude that it was worth the risk.

1. The passage mention James McCain

A. as an author of detective stories

C. as tough cunning and courageous

Sample Passage 13

Until the end of his first year at school, Cyril retained many of the pleasures and pursuits he had brought with him from home, and he kept an old interest in butterflies and fossils. His grandmother had presented him with a fine bird's eggs cabinet, but he could never bring himself to risk in climbing trees. Once or twice he dissected dead birds from sheer determination to overcome his horror of the operation. Probably it was his envy of those physically unlike himself that brought on a phase during which he drew massive athletes with thick necks and square shoulders. Again he was pitying himself for what he could never be,

1. The reason Why Cyril made drawings of athletes was that

- A. though he admired them, he lacked a fine physique himself
- B. he loved violent exercises
- C. athletics was a passion with him
- D. he had to complete an assignment

2. Cyril dissected dead birds to

Sample Passage 14

There is modicum of truth in the assertion that "a working knowledge of ancient history is necessary to the intelligent interpretation of current events". But the sage who uttered these words of wisdom might well have added something on the benefits of studying, particularly, the famous battles of history for the lessons they contain for those of us who lead or aspire to leadership. Such a study will reveal certain qualities and attributes which enabled the winners to win and certain deficiencies which caused the losers to lose. And the student will see that the same patterns recurs consistently, again and again, throughout the centuries.

1. A person who aspires to lead could learn from the history of battles

- A. what led the previous leaders win a battle
- B. what made them lose a battle
- C. the qualities and deficiencies of commanders of these battles
- D. the strategies that they have evolved in course of these battles

2. In this context, "intelligent interpretation of current event" means

- A. rational explanation of events
- B. appropriate understanding of events
- C. intellectual outlook on events
- D. skilful interpretation of events

3. The expression "more than a modicum of truth" means

- A. some truth
- B. much truth
- C. more than a small amount of truth
- D. nothing but truth

4. According to the writer, a study of famous battles of history would

- A. be beneficial to wise men
- B. provide food to modern leaders for reflection
- C. be more useful than a general knowledge of ancient history
- D. help us understand the art of modern warfare

5. A knowledge of history is necessary to interpret current problems because

- A. they have roots in the past
- B. they can be contrasted with the past events
- C. they may be repetitions of past events
- D. only then they can be put in a proper context

Sample Passage 15

The world dismisses curiosity by calling it idle or mere idle curiosity even though curious persons are seldom idle. Parents do their best to extinguish curiosity in their children because it makes life difficult to be faced everyday with a string of unanswerable questions about what makes fire hot or why grass grows. Children whose curiosity survives parental discipline are invited to join our university. With the university, they go on asking their questions and trying to find the answers. In the eyes of a scholar, that is what a university for. some of the questions which the scholars ask seem to the world to be scarcely worth asking, let alone answering. they asked questions too minute and specialised for you and me to understand without years of explanation. If the world inquires of one of them why he wants to know the answer to a particular question he may say especially if he is a scientist, that the answer will in some obscure way make possible a new machine or weapon or gadget. He talks that way because he knows that the world understands and respects utility.

But to you who are now part of the university, he will say that he wants to know the answer simply because he does not know it, the way the mountain climber wants to climb a mountain, simply because it is there. Similarly a historian asked by an outsider why he studies history may come out with the argument that he has learnt to respect to report on such occasions, something about knowledge of the past making it possible to understand the present and mould the future. But if you really want to know why a historian studies the past, the answer is much simpler, something happened and he would like to know what. All this does not mean that the answers which scholars to find to their enormous consequences but these seldom form the reason for asking the question or pursuing the answers. It is true that scholars can be put to work answering questions for sake of the consequences as thousands are working now, for example, in search of a cure for cancer. But this is not the primary scholars. For the consequences are usually subordinate to the satisfaction of curiosity.

1. Children whose curiosity survives parental discipline means

- A. Children retaining their curiosity in spite of being discouraged by their parents
- B. children pursuing their mental curiosity
- C. children's curiosity subdued due to parents intervention
- D. children being disciplined by their parents

2. According to their passage, the children make life difficult for their parents

- A. by their ceaseless curiosity
- B. by unceasing bombardment of questions
- C. by asking irrelevant questions
- D. by posing profound questions

3. The common people consider some of the questions that the scholars ask unimportant

- A. as they are too lazy and idle
- B. as they are too modest
- C. as it's beyond their comprehension
- D. as it is considered a waste of time

4. A historian really studies the past

- A. to comprehend the present and to reconstruct the future
- B. to explain the present and plan the future
- C. to understand the present and make fortune
- D. to understand the present and mould the future

5. According to their passage, parents do their best to discourage curiosity in their children

- A. because they have no time
- B. because they have no patience to answer them
- C. because they feel that their children ask stupid questions continuously
- D. because they are unable to answer all the questions

Sample Passage 17

Modern economies does not differentiate between renewable and nonrenewable materials, as its method is to measures everything by means of a money price. Thus, taking various alternatives fuels, like coal, oil, wood or water power: the only difference between them recognised by modern economics is relative cost per equivalent unit. The cheapest is automatically the one to be preferred, as to do otherwise would be irrational and 'uneconomic'. From a Buddhist point of view of course this will not do, the essential difference between non-renewable fuels like coal and oil on the one hand and renewable fuels like wood and water power on the other cannot be simply overlooked. Non-renewable goods must be used only if they are indispensable, and then only with the greatest care and the highest concern for conservation. To use them carelessly or extravagantly is an act of violence, and while complete non-violence may not be possible on earth, it is nonetheless the duty of man to aim at deal of non-violence in all he does.

1. Which of the following statements may be assumed to be false from the information in the passage?

- A. The writer finds the attitude of modern economists towards natural resources to be uneconomic.
 B. Buddhist economists are in different to the cost of fuels
 C. To use oil on non-essentials is contrary to the Buddhist economic philosophy
 D. To fell a tree is an act of violence not permitted by Buddhist economists

Of the above statements

- A. A and B are false
 C. C and D are false
 B.A,B and D are false
 D. All A, B, C, and D are false

2. According to the passage, Buddhist economists are not in favour of

- A. measuring everything in terms of money
 C. economic development
 B. using non-renewable sources
 D. applying non-violence to every sphere of life

3. In this passage the author is trying to

- A. differentiate between renewable and non-renewable materials
 B. show that the modern economist is only concerned with costs
 C. underline the need for conserving natural resources
 D. different between two economic philosophies

4. Fill in the blanks with the appropriate pair of phrases:

The passage suggests that while a modern economist, considers it uneconomic to use form of fuel, a Buddhist economist considers it uneconomic to use form a fuel

- A. a cheap, a renewable
 C. an expensive, an non-renewable
 B. an irrational, an essential
 D. a rational, an unessential

5. The Buddhist economist's attitude implies that fuels like coal and oil must be used only if

- A. there is a plentiful supply
 C. the relative cost of each is than of wood and water
 B. wood and water can be dispensed with
 D. there is no alternative fuel available

Sample Passage 18

The Indian middle class consist of so many strata that it defies categorisation under a single term class, which would imply a considerable degree of homogeneity. Yet two paradoxical features characterise its conduct fairly uniformly; extensive practice and intensive abhorrence of corruption.

In the several recent surveys of popular perceptions of corruptions, politicians of course invariably and understandably top the list, closely followed by bureaucrats, policemen, lawyers, businessmen and others. The quintessential middle class, If teachers do not figure high on this priority list, it is not for lack of trying, but for lack of opportunities. Over the years, the sense of shock over acts of corruption in the middle class has witnessed a steady decline, as its ambitions for a better material life have soared but the resources for meeting such ambitions have not kept pace.

What is fascinating, however, is the intense yearning of this class for a clean corruptionless politics and society, a yearning that has again and again surfaced with any figure public or obscure, focus on his mission of eradicating corruption. Even the repeated failure of this promise on virtually every man's part has not subjected it to the law part has not subjected it to the law of diminishing returns.

1. The intense Middle Class intensely yearns for

- A. better material resources
B. extensive practice of corruption
C. clean honest society
D. law of increasing returns

2. Teachers are not high on the list of corruption because they do not have

- A. courage
B. opportunities
C. support
D. ambition

3. The Indian Middle class is

- A. defiant
B. mysterious
C. homogeneous
D. stratified

4. Who figure on top of the list of corruption?

- A. businessmen
B. lawyers
C. politicians
D. policemen

5. This yearning, over the years, has

- A. persisted
B. soared
C. declined
D. disappeared

Sample Passage 19

Courage is not only the basis of virtue; it is its expression. faith, hope, charity and all the rest don't become virtues until it takes courage to exercise them. There are roughly two types of courage. the first an emotional state which urges a man to risk injury or death, is physical courage. The second, more reasoning attitude which enables him to take coolly his career, happiness, his whole future or his judgement of what he thinks either right or worthwhile, is moral courage. I have known many men, who had marked physical courage, but lacked moral courage. Some of them were in high places, but they failed to be great in themselves because they lacked moral courage.

On the other hand I have seen men who undoubtedly possessed moral courage but were very cautious about taking physical risks. But I have never met a man with moral courage who couldn't, when it was really necessary, face a situation boldly.

1. A man of courage is

- A. cunning
B. intelligent
C. curious
D. careful

2. Physical courage is an expression of

- A. emotions
B. deliberation
C. uncertainty
D. defiance

3. A man with moral courage can

- A. defy his enemies
B. overcome all difficulties
C. flace a situation boldly
D. be very pragmatic

4. People with physical courage of ten lack

- A. mental balance
B. capacity for reasoning
C. emotional stability
D. will to fight

5. All virtues become meaningful because of

- A. faith
B. charity
C. courage
D. hope

Sample Passage 20

Nationalism, of course, is a curious phenomenon which at a certain stage in a country's history gives life, growth and unity but, at the same time, it has a tendency to limit one, because one thinks of one's country as something different from the rest of world. One's perceptive changes and one is continuously thinking of one's own struggles and virtues and failing to the exclusion of other thoughts. The result is that the same nationalism which is the symbol of growth for a people becomes a symbol of the cessation of that growth in mind. Nationalism, when it becomes successful sometimes goes on spreading in an aggressive way and becomes a danger internationally. Whatever line of thought you follow, you arrive at the conclusion that some kind of balance must be found. Otherwise something that was good can turn into evil. Culture, which is essentially good become not only static but aggressive and something that breeds conflict and hatred when looked at from a wrong point of view. How are you find a balance, I don't know. Apart from the political and economic problems of the age , perhaps, that is the greatest problem today because behind it there is tremendous search for something which it cannot found. We turn to economic theories because they have an undoubted importance. It is folly to talk of culture or even of god. When human beings starve and die. Before one can talk about anything else one must provide the normal essentials of life to human beings. That is where economies comes in. Human beings today are not in mood to tolerate this suffering and starvation and inequality when they see that the burden is not equally shared. Others profit while they only bear the burden.

1. The greatest problem in the middle of the passage refers to the question

- A. how to mitigate hardship to human beings B. how to contain the dangers of aggressive nationalism.
C. how to share the economic burden equally D. how to curb international hatred

2. Negative national feeling can make a nation

- A. selfish B. self centred C. indifferent D. dangerous

3. Suitable title for this passage can be

- A. Nationalism breeds unity B. Nationalism - a road to world unity
C. Nationalism is not enough D. Nationalism and national problems

4. 'Others' in the last sentence refers to

- A. other people B. other nations C. other communities D. other neighbours

5. Aggressive nationalism

- A. breeds threat to international relations B. leads to stunted growth
C. endangers national unity D. isolates a country

Sample passage 21

There was a marked difference of quality between the personages who haunted near bridge of brick and the personages who haunted the far one of stone. Those of lowest character preferred the former, adjoining the town; they did not mind the glare of the public eye. they had been of no account during their successes; and though they might feel dispirited, they had no sense of shame in their ruin. Instead of sighing at their adversaries they spat, and instead of saying the iron had entered into their souls they said they were down in their luck. The miserable's who would pause on the remoter bridge of a politer stamp persons who did not know how to get rid of the weary time. The eyes of his species were mostly directed over the parapet upon the running water below. While one on the town ward bridge did not mind who saw him so, and kept his back to parapet to survey the passer-by, one on this never faced the road, never turned his head at coming foot-steps, but, sensitive on his own condition, watched the current whenever a stranger approached, as if some strange fish interested him, though every finned thing had been poached out of the rivers years before.

1. In this passage the author is trying to

- A. explain the difference between the construction of the two bridges
B. describe the way different sections of people like to dress

Sample Passage 22

The strength of the electronics industry in Japan is the Japanese ability to organise production and marketing rather than their achievements in original research. The British are generally recognised as a far more inventive collection of individuals, but never seem able to exploit what they invent. There are many examples, from the TSR Z hovercraft, high speed train and Sinclair scooter to the Triumph, BSA and Norton Motorcycle which all prove this sad rule. The Japanese were able to exploits their strengths in marketing and development many years ago, and their success was at first either not understood in the West or was dismissed as something which could have been produced only at their low price. They were sold because they were cheap copies of other people's ideas churned out of a workhouse which was dedicated to hard grind above all else.

1. It is evident from the passage that the strength of a country's industry depends upon

- A. original research
- B. international cooperation
- C. dedicated workforce
- D. electronic development

2. The sad rule mentioned in this passage refers to

- A. the inability of the Japanese to be inventive like the British
- B. the inability of the British to be industrious like the Japanese
- C. the lack of variety in Japanese inventions
- D. the poorer marketing ability of British

3. The TSR Z hovercraft, high speed train, Sinclair scooter etc. are the symbols of

- A. Japanese success
- B. British failure
- C. British success
- D. Japanese failure

4. According to the passage, prosperity in industry depends upon

- A. productivity
- B. inventiveness 'marketing ability
- D. official patronage

5. The main theme of this passage is

- A. electronic industry in Japan
- B. industrial comparison between Japan and Britain
- C. the role of marketing efficiency in industrial prosperity
- D. the importance of original research in industry

Sample passage 24

Soft bodied animals like caterpillars often fall a prey to voracious hunters like birds or reptiles. Despite having no means to 'actively' defend themselves, with weapons like claws or jaws, they have nevertheless, evolved other equally effective deterrents. A particular species of the caterpillar lives at an altitude over 2,500 metres in the Himalayas. It uses prominent colour to inform would be predators of its in edibility. In the event that an inexperienced or adventurous bird did eat the caterpillar, it would probably vomit it soon after, and subsequently desist from attacking similar species in future. Though this would do the unfortunate victim no good, the species benefits. A rare example of the martyr among animals.

1. The expression "others equally effective deterrents" mean

- A. preventive weapons which have equal effect of others
- B. mechanism which scares everyone equally well
- C. preventive equipment which it is as effective as something that has been already mentioned in the passage
- D. deterrents that are as powerful as those the caterpillars have

2. Experienced birds do not attack the Himalayan caterpillars because they are

- A. repulsive
- B. very aggressive
- C. inedible
- D. diseased

3. The Himalayan caterpillar uses prominent colours to

- A. warn the predator,
- B. attack the predator
- C. reveal itself .
- D. defend itself

4. Caterpillars cannot defend themselves because

- A. are passive animals
- B. are lazy
- C. cannot acquire weapons
- D. have no claws or jaws,

5. In the context' of this passage, a martyr is one who dies.

- A. without putting up resistance
- B. without any gain to oneself
- C. while defending ones homeland
- D. to save others

Sample passage 25

What needs to be set right is our approach to work. It is a common sight in our country of employees reporting for duty on time and at the same time doing little work. If an assessment is made of time they spent in gossiping, drinking tea, eating "pan" and smoking cigarettes, it will be shocking to know that the time devoted to actual work is negligible. The problem is the standard which the leadership in administration sets for the staff. Forgot the ministers because they mix politics and administration. What do top bureaucrats do? What do the below down officials do? The administration set up remains week mainly because the employees do not have the right example to follow and they are more concerned about being in the good books of the bosses than doing work.

1. The employees in our country

- A. are quite punctual but not duty conscious
- B. are not punctual, but somehow manage to complete their work
- C. are somewhat lazy but good natured
- D. are not very highly qualified

2. According to the writer, the administration in India

- A. is by and large effective
- B. is very strict and firm
- C. is affected by red tape
- D. is more or less ineffective

3. The word 'assessment' means

- A. enquiry
- B. report
- C. evaluation
- D. summary

4. The leadership in administration

- A. sets a fine example to the employees
- B. is of a reasonably high standard
- C. is composed of idealists
- D. is of a very poor standard

5. The central idea of passage could be best expressed by the following

- A. The employee outlook towards work is justified
- B. The employee must change their outlook towards work
- C. The employees would never change their work culture
- D. The employer-employee relationship is far from healthy

Sample Passage 26

The assault on the purity of the environment is the price that we pay for many of the benefits of modern technology. For the advantage of automotive transportation we pay a price in smog-induced diseases; for the powerful effects of new insecticides, we pay a price in dwindling wildlife and disturbances in the relation of living things and their surroundings; for nuclear power, we risk the biological hazards of radiation. By increasing agricultural production with fertilizers, we worsen water population.

The highly developed nations of the world are not only the immediate beneficiaries of the good that technology can do, that are also the first victims of environmental diseases that technology breeds. In the past, the environmental effects which accompanied technological progress were restricted to a small and relatively short time, the new hazards neither local nor brief. Modern air pollution covers vast areas of continents: Radioactive fallout from the nuclear explosion is worldwide. Radioactive pollutants now on the earth surface will be found there for generations, and in case of Carbon-14, for thousands of years.

1. The widespread use of insecticides has

- A. reduced the number of wild animals
- B. caused imbalance in the relationship between living beings and their environment
- C. eliminated diseases by killing mosquitoes and flies
- D. caused biological hazards

2. The passage emphasizes that modern technology

- A. is an unmixed blessing
- B. has caused serious hazards to life
- C. has produced powerful chemicals
- D. has benefited highly developed nations

3. According to the passage the increasing use of fertilisers is responsible for

- A. abundance of food
- B. disturbance in the ecological system
- C. water pollution
- D. increase in diseases

4. The harmful effects of modern technology are

- A. widespread but short-lived
- B. widespread and long-lasting
- C. limited and long-lasting
- D. severe but short-lived

5. Radioactive pollutants

- A. are limited in their effect
- B. will infect the atmosphere for thousands of years
- C. will be on the surface of earth for a very long time
- D. will dissipate in short span of time

Sample passage 27

Read through the following paragraphs and answer the questions that follow:

The greatest enemy of mankind, as people have discovered, is not science, but war. Science merely reflects the prevailing social forces. It is found that, when there is peace, science is constructive; when there is war; science is perverted to destructive ends. The weapons which science gives us do not necessarily cause war; they make war increasingly terrible. Till now, it has brought us to the doorstep of doom. Our main problem, therefore, is not to curb science, but to stop war -to substitute law for force, and international government for anarchy in the relations of one nation with another. That is a job in which every body must suddenly work us up to the fact that we have very little time. The hour is late and our work has scarcely begun. Now we are face to face with an urgent question "Can education and tolerance, understanding and creative intelligence, run fast enough to keep us abreast with our own mounting capacity to destroy?" This is the question which we shall have to answer one way or the other in this generation. Science must help us in arriving at the answer, but the main decision lies within ourselves.

1. According to the writer, the real enemy of mankind is not science but war, because

- A. Science merely invents the weapons with which war is fought
- B. Science during wars becomes destructive
- C. The weapons that science invents necessarily lead to war
- D. The weapons invented by science do not cause war, though they make it more destructive

2. War can be stopped if

- A. Science is not allowed to lead us to utter destruction.
- B. We replace force and lawlessness by law and international government
- C. Science is restricted to be utilized only during war time
- D. Weapons invented by science are not used to launch a war.

3. According to the writer, the main problem we are faced with is to

- A. Stop science from reflecting social forces.
- B. Stop scientific activities everywhere
- C. abolish war

D. Prevent scientists from participating in destructive activities

4. Our mounting sagacity to destroy can be kept under control by

- A. Encouraging social forces
B. Education and broad-mindedness
C. Insight and constructive thinking
D. Both B and C (as above) together

5. The expression 'bring to the doorstep of doom' means

- A. Carry close to death and destruction
B. Lead to the threshold of a new destiny
C. Indulge in a ruinous activity
D. Introduces to an unpredictable destiny

Sample passage 28

Economists, ethicists and business experts persuade us that honesty is the best policy, but their evidence is weak. We hoped to find data that would support their theories and thus, perhaps, encourage higher standards of business behavior. To our surprise, their pet. theories failed to stand up. Treachery, we found, can pay. There is no compelling economic reason to tell the truth or keep one's word. Punishment for the treacherous in the real world is neither swift nor sure.

Honesty is, in fact, primarily a moral choice. Business people do tell themselves that, in the long run, they will do well by doing good. But there is little factual or logical basis for this conviction. Without values, without a basic preference of right over wrong, trust based on such delusion would crumble in the face of temptation. Most of us choose virtue because we want to believe in ourselves and because others respect and believe us.

And due to this, we should be happy. We can be proud of a system in which people are honest because they want to be, not because they have to be. Materially, too, trust based on morality provides great advantages. It allows us to join in great and exciting enterprises that we could never undertake if we relied on economic incentives alone.

Economists tell us that trust is enforced in the market place through retaliation and reputation. If you violate a trust, your victim is apt to seek revenge and others are likely to stop doing business with you, at least under favorable terms. a man or woman with a reputation for fair dealing will prosper. Therefore, profit maximizes are honest. This sounds plausible enough until you look for concrete examples. Cases that apparently demonstrate the awful consequences of trust turn out to be few and weak, while evidence that treachery can pay seem compelling.

1. What did the author find out about the theory that honesty is the best policy ?

- A. It is a useless theory
B. It is correct on many occasions
C. It is correct for all businessmen .
D. It is correct only occasionally

2. What do economists and ethicists want us to believe?

- A. Businessmen are honest only at times
B. Businessmen should be honest at all times
C. Businessmen cannot be honest at all times
D. Businessmen turn dishonest at times

3. Which is the material advantage, which the author sees in being honest? It permits one to

- A.Undertake activities which may not be economically attractive
B. Be honest for the sake of honesty alone
C. Make a lot of profit in various areas
D. none

4. Which of the following is FALSE according to the passage?

- A. People are generally honest because it pays in the long run
B. Virtuous behaviour earns the self respect of others
C. Economists believe that all businessman are dishonest
D. Generally people are honest to earn self-respect

Sample passage 29

Primitive man was probably more concerned with fire as a source of warmth and as a means of cooking food than as a source of light. Before he discovered less laborious ways of making fire, he had to preserve it, and whenever he went on a journey he carried a firebrand with him. His discovery that the firebrand, from which the torch may very well have developed, could be used for illumination was probably incidental to the primary purpose of preserving a flame.

Lamps, too, probably developed by accident. Early man has had his first conception of a lamp while watching a twig or fibre burning in the molten fat dropped from a roasting carcass. All he had to do was to fashion a vessel to contain fat and float a lighted reed in it. Such lamps, which were made of hollowed stones or sea shells, have persisted in identical form up to quit recent times.

1. Primitive man's most important use for fire was

- A. To provide warmth B. To cook food C. To provide light D. Both(a)and(b)

2. The firebrand was used to

- A. Prevent accidents B. Provide light C. Scare animals D. Save labour

3. By 'primary' the author means

- A. Primitive B. Fundamental C. Elemental D. Essential

4. Lamps probably developed through mere

- A. Hazard B. Fat C. Chance D. Planning

5. Early lamps were made by

- A. Using a reed as a wick in the fat B. Letting a reed soak the fat
C. Putting the fat in a shell and lighting it D. Floating a reed in the sea- shell

Sample passage 30

Work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion. The general recognition of this fact is shown in the proverbial phrase, 'It is the busiest man who has time to spare'. Thus, an elderly lady at leisure can spend the entire day writing a postcard to her niece. An hour will be spent in finding the postcard, another hunting for spectacles, half an hour to search for the address, an hour and a quarter in composition and twenty minutes in deciding whether or not to take an umbrella when going to the pillar box in the street. The total effort that would occupy a busy man for three minutes, all told, may in this fashion leave another person completely exhausted after a day of doubt, anxiety and toil.

1. Explain the sentence; 'Work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion'.

- A. The more work there is to be done, the more the time needed.
B. Whatever time is available for a given amount of work, all of it will be used.
C. If you have more time, you can do more work.
D. If you have some important work to do, you should always have some additional time.

2. Who is the person likely to take more time to do work:

- A. A busy man. B. A man of leisure C. An elderly person D. An exhausted person

3. What does the expression 'pillar box' stand for?

- A. A box attached to the pillar B. A box in the pillar
C. Box office D. A pillar-type post box

4. What happens when the time to be spent on some work increases?

- A. The work is done smoothly B. The work is done leisurely
C. The work consumes all the time D. The work needs additional time

5. What is the told time spent by the elderly lady in writing a postcard?

- A. Three minutes B. Four hours and five minutes C. Half an hour D. A full day

Sample passage 32

Our body is a wondrous mechanism and when subjected to unusual stress over a period of time, it adapts itself to deal more effectively with that stress. So when you exert your muscles against resistance, they are forced to adapt and deal with this extraordinary work load. This is the principle of weight training. Strands of muscle fibers become thicker and stronger in response to the demands placed on them.

One of the great merits of weight training is the strength of your heart. During weight training, your heart is forced to beat faster and stronger in order to pump sufficient blood to the muscles being worked. In time, your heart, like your body, will adapt to this extra-workload by becoming stronger and more efficient. Since your body needs a given amount of blood to perform its daily tasks your heart will now need fewer beats to pump the same quantity of blood. Sounds good? There's more. Your entire circulatory system is given a thorough workout every time you exercise, which increases its overall efficiency. Even the neural parts from your brain's command centers to each individual muscle become more effective, enabling easier recruitment of muscle fibres for carrying out physical tasks. In essence, your body becomes a well-oiled and finely tuned piece of machinery, whirring along without any breakdown. In today's stress filled world, you need all the help you can get.

1. What is the principal training of weight lifting?

- A. Thorough acclimatization B. Naturalization
C. Adapting to excessive workload D. By accelerating the circulation of blood

2. How much blood does the heart pump at the same number of heartbeats, when exposed to excessive stress?

- A. Same quantity B. Less than before C. More than normal D. None of these

3. In the present world, the importance of physical exercise has

- A. Increased B. Decreased C. Remained at the same level D. None of these

4. What does the above passage suggest?

- A. We should carry out physical exercise as a routine
B. Physical exercise is necessary occasionally
C. We should ignore physical exercise
D. We should subject our body to as much exercise as it can withstand.

Sample passage 33

Teaching, more even than most other professions, has been transformed during the last hundred years from a small, highly skilled profession concerned with a minority of the population, to a large and important branch of the public service. The profession has a great and honourable tradition, extending from the dawn of history until recent times, but any teacher in the modern world who allows himself to be inspired by the ideals of his predecessors is likely to be made sharply aware that it is not his function to teach what he thinks, but to instill such beliefs and prejudices as are thought useful by his employers.

1. In ancient times the teaching profession was

- A. reserved for the upper class. B. reserved for the privileged few.
C. open to all. D. limited to a highly skilled minority.

2. What has transformed teaching into an important branch of public service ?

- A. teaching skills. B. technical developments.
C. utilitarian philosophy. D. the demand of the employing industry.

3. According to this passage, in modern times a successful teacher is primarily supposed to

- A. impart knowledge. B. impart new and the latest skills.
C. toe the lines preferred by those in authority. D. instil values he cherishes the most

4. The modern teacher is not able to follow the ideals of his predecessors because

- A. of tremendous advancements in professional skills.
B. of social and financial constraints
C. the students are not serious about studies.
D. the modern teacher has more interested in politics than in academic activity.

5. The author seems to

- A. be against the current trend in the teaching profession
B. approve the recent developments in the mode of teaching
C. be a traditionalist in his view
D. consider education as a part of publication service.

Sample passage 34

Very few people in the modern world obtain their food supply by hunting and gathering in the natural environment surrounding their homes. This method of harvesting from nature's provision is the oldest known subsistence strategy, and has been practiced for at least the last 2 million years. It was, indeed, the only way to obtain food until rudimentary farming and the domestication of animals was introduced about 10,000 years ago.

Because hunter gathers have fared poorly in comparison with their agricultural cousins, their numbers had dwindled, and they have been forced to live in marginal environments such as deserts, forests, or arctic wastelands. In higher latitudes, the shorter growing season has restricted the availability of plant life. Such conditions have caused a greater dependence on hunting and, along the coasts and waterways, on fishing. The abundance of vegetation in the lower altitudes of the tropics, on the other hand, has provided a greater opportunity for gathering a variety of plants. In short, the environmental differences have restricted the diet and have limited possibilities for the development of subsistence societies.

Contemporary hunter-gatherers may help us understand our prehistoric ancestors. We knew from observation of modern hunter-gatherers in both Africa and Alaska that a society based on hunting and gathering must be very mobile. While the entire community camps in a central location, a smaller party harvests the food within a reasonable distance from the camp. When the food in the area is exhausted, the community moves on to exploit another site. We also notice a seasonal migration pattern evolving for most hunter-gathers, along with a strict division of labour between the sexes. These patterns of behavior may be similar to those practiced by mankind during the Paleolithic Period.

1. With which of the following topics is the passage primarily concerned?

- A. The Paleolithic Period B. Subsistence farming
C. Hunter-gathers D. Marginal environments

2. Which is the oldest subsistence strategy?

- A. Migrating B. Domesticating animals C. Farming D. Hunting and gathering

3. The word " rudimentary " in line 4 could best be replaced by

- A. crude B. inconsistent C. neglectful D. careless

4. When was hunting and gathering introduced?

- A. Ten million years ago B. Two million years ago
C. Ten thousand years ago D. Two thousand years ago

5. The word "dwindled" in line 7 is closest in meaning to

- A. disagreed B. decreased C. disappeared D. died

6. The phrase " such conditions " in line 9 refers to

- A. greater dependence B. higher altitudes C. plant life D. shorter growing season

Sample passage 35

It is difficult to reconcile the ideas of different schools of thought on the question of education. Some people maintain that pupils at school should concentrate on a narrow range of subjects, which will benefit them directly in the subsequent careers. Others contend that they should study a wide range of subjects so that they have not only the specialized knowledge necessary for their chosen careers but also sound general knowledge about the world they will have to work and live in. Supporters of the first theory state that the greatest contributions to civilisation are made by those who are most expert in their trade or profession. Those on the other side say that, unless they have a broad general education, the experts will be too narrow in their outlook to have sympathy with their fellows or proper sense of responsibility towards humanity as a whole.

1. 'Schools of thought' can be explained as

- A. groups of people whose job is to think
- B. groups of people who are schooled to think
- C. groups of people who study in a particular school thoughtfully
- D. groups of people having the same ideas but with different perception on a particular subject

2. Broad general knowledge is necessary because

- A. Specialization is incomplete without it
- B. Without it no one would get a job.
- C. It teaches us about different things.
- D. It broadens one's outlook.

3. The idea of the first school of thought in the passage is that

- A. Student should concentrate on studies.
- B. Student should not undertake any specialized work
- C. Student should study all the subjects they want to.
- D. Student should study a few subjects that will help them in their profession.

4. Supporters of the first theory say that

- A. Experts have contributed most to progress in the modern world.
- B. People with general knowledge have contributed to civilisation
- C. Experts have done nothing to help mankind.
- D. People with general knowledge are more useful than experts.

5. According to the second school of thought, education will not be very effective if pupils.

- A. Have inadequate knowledge of their own work.
- B. Do not have a wide general education.
- C. Ignore the study of fine arts
- D. Have nothing but general knowledge.

Sample passage 36

Noise, commonly defined as unwanted sound, is another environmental pollutant. Particularly in congested urban areas, the noise produced as a byproduct of our advancing technology causes physical and psychological harm, and detracts from the quality of life for those who are exposed to it.

Unlike the eye, the ear has no lid; therefore noise penetrates without protection. Loud noises instinctively signal danger to any organism with a hearing mechanism, including human beings. In response, heartbeat and respiration accelerate, blood vessels constrict, the skin pales, the muscles tense. In fact, there is a general increase in functioning brought about by the flow of adrenaline released in response to fear, and some of these responses persist even longer than the noise, occasionally as long as thirty minutes after the sound has ceased.

Because noise is unavoidable in a complex, industrial society, we are constantly responding in the same ways that we that we would respond to danger. Recently, researchers have concluded that noise and our response may be much more than an annoyance. It may be a serious threat to physical and psychological health and well-being, causing damage not only to the ear and brain but also to the heart and stomach. We have long known that hearing loss is America's number one nonfatal health problem, but now we are learning that some of us with heart disease and ulcers may be victims of noise as well. In addition, the psychic effect of noise is very important. Nervousness, irritability, tension, and anxiety increase, affecting the quality of rest during sleep, and the efficiency of activities during waking hours.

1. What is the author's main point?

- A. noise may pose a serious threat to our physical and psychological health
- B. Loud noises signal danger
- C. Hearing loss is America's number one nonfatal problem
- D. The ear is not like the eye

2. What is the author's definition of sound?

- A. Unwanted noise
- B. A byproduct of technology
- C. Physical and psychological harm
- D. Congestion

3. What was probably the topic of the paragraph that preceded this passage?

- A. Environmental pollutants
- B. Urban areas
- C. Technology
- D. Disease

4. The word "congested" in line 2 could best be replaced by

- A. hazardous B. polluted C. crowded D. rushed

5. It can be inferred from the passage that he eye

- A. responds to fear B. enjoys greater protection than the ear
C. increases functions D. is damaged by noise

6. According to the passage, people respond to loud noises in the same way that they respond to

- A. annoyance B. danger C. damage D. disease

7. The word "accelerate" in line 6 is closest in meaning to

- A. decline B. interrupt C. increase D. cease

8. The word "it" in line 12 refers to

- A. noise B. harm C. life D. technology

9. According to the author, which of the following is true?

- A. Noise is not a serious problem today
B. Noise is America's number one problem
C. Noise is an unavoidable problem in an industrial society
D. Noise is a complex problem

10. The phrase "as well" is closest in meaning to which of the following?

- A. after all B. also C. instead D. regardless

Sample passage 37

A monkey is sitting expectantly in a laboratory, wearing earphones that keep its head in an upright position. Its hand rests at its waist near a telegraph key that it can feel but cannot see. Soon a green light begins to blink and the monkey presses the key to signal that it is ready. Then it hears two syllables coming through the earphones, realizes that the syllables are different, and correctly lifts the key.

This is not an amazing event in the field of research on primate behaviour, scientific studies on animal behaviour have been conducted for many years. Chimpanzees, gorillas, and monkeys have all been taught to comprehend messages from humans. What is new about the study is what the research noticed about the monkey's use of the hands. Although either hand could have been used for pressing the key, every one of the monkeys used its right hand. In other tasks, however, like grabbing food from a feeder or taking something that is offered to them, the monkeys seemed to have no preference for one hand over the other.

It is generally been assumed that only humans have the trait of favouring one hand. The right hemisphere of the brain controls the left arm and the hand, important mental abilities such as speaking and understanding language are handled by the left side of the brain, so it is thought that this produces a dominance of the right-handed humans. However, a growing number of researchers are challenging this notion that non-human primates have no hand preferences. They argue that these traits can be traced back to primates living tens of millions of years ago. Their contention is that primates use what they are doing. And then why haven't researchers noticed this before? It is difficult to set up experiments that require the kind of task where handiness is important.

1. With what topic is this passage primarily concerned?

- A. the mental abilities of monkeys B. hand preferences in primates
C. hemispheres of the brain D. experiments on non human primates

2. In what situation would a primate be most likely to use its right hand?

- A. picking out a red block from a group of coloured blocks
B. pushing a button that is hidden behind a black curtain
C. picking up a banana and peeling it
D. choosing a food after hearing the correct command

3. Why are scientists probably not very interested in the activity of the monkey as described in the first paragraph?

- A. The experiment has not followed a precise scientific format
B. The experiment is too easy for monkeys to do
C. Similar studies have been done many times
D. Scientists don't agree with the conclusions

4. In the first paragraph, what is the monkey expecting?

- A. a blinking light B. an earphone C. some food D. a telegraph key

5. According to the passage, what do most scientists assume?

- A. Only humans have hand preferences

- B. Only monkeys can learn to indicate their food choices
- C. Speaking and understanding are more important than reading and writing
- D. Setting up experiments for primates is difficult

6. In line 14, the word "challenging" could best be replaced by

- A. accepting
- B. favoring
- C. claiming
- D. contesting

7. Why does the author begin with the description of a monkey performing an experiment?

- A. to show the importance of the experiment
- B. to distinguish between two kinds of research
- C. to get a generalization of a concept
- D. to give an example of something to be discussed

8. Which of the following would most likely be the topic of the next paragraph?

- A. a discussion of the differences between the hemispheres of the brain
- B. an example of a chimpanzee's ability to comprehend language
- C. reasons that some types of experiments that require hypothesis
- D. a discussion of types of experiments that require precise manipulations

9. Which of the following statements is best supported by this passage?

- A. Scientists disagree about the idea of handiness in primates
- B. The right side of the brain is not as important as the left
- C. It is difficult to teach primates to comprehend human messages
- D. Primates use both hands equally in carrying out precise tasks

10. The relationship between a primate and a monkey is similar to the relationship between a ritle and

- A. an animal
- B. a snake
- C. a mammal
- D. a gorilla

Sample passage 38

Broken friendship may be repaired but the break will always show. Friendship is a precious thing - too precious a treasure to be carelessly broken or thrown away. The world handles the word 'friend' lightly; its real, true, deeper meaning is forgotten. Your friend is one who appreciates you - your faults as well as your virtues. He understands and sympathizes with your defeats and victories, your aim and ideals, your joys and temptations, your hopes and disappointments, as no one else does or can. It is your friend, to whom you turn for counsel, for comfort, for praise, he may not be as learned as some or as wise as others. Blessed is the man or woman into whose life has come the beauty and power of such a friendship. Prize it well. Do all in your power to keep such a friendship unbroken. Avoid the break, for when it comes it cannot be mended and the jarring note mares the harmony.

1. In what way will you judge your sincere friend?

- A. by his appearance.
- B. by the way he appreciates your virtues
- C. by the way he pinpoints your demerits
- D. by the way he appreciates your faults and virtues

2. A true friend is one who

- A. shares with another all the joys of life
- B. encourages you in your hour of trials and tribulations
- C. deserts you
- D. shares your defeats and victories, aims, and ideals, joys, and temptations

3. We owe our blessed life to

- A. the experience of moments of loneliness
- B. a friend's constant companionship
- C. the power and beauty of friendship
- D. the feeling that there is someone to humour us

4. Why do we turn to sincere friends?

- A. we turn to sincere friends for physical support.
- B. we turn to them for financial help.
- C. we look to them for their magnanimity.
- D. we turn to them for counsel, comfort and words of cheer.

5. Friendship ought not to be broken. Why?

- A. because it will foster discord
- B. because it will make life troublesome
- C. because it will rob life of all its vitality and vivacity.
- D. because broken friendship cannot be mended.

Sample passage 39

The greatest enemy of mankind, as people have discovered, is not science, but war. Science merely reflects the prevailing social forces. It is found that, when there is peace, science is constructive, when there is war; science is perverted to destructive ends. The weapons which science gives us to not necessarily cause war: they make war increasing terrible. Till now, it has brought to the doorstep of doom. Our main problem, therefore, is not to curb science, but to stop war-to substitute law for force, and international government for anarchy in the relation of one nation with another. That is job in which everybody must participate, including the scientist. But the bombing of Hiroshima suddenly woke up to the fact that we have very little time. The hour is late and our work has scarcely begun. Now we are face to face with an urgent question-"Can education and tolerance, understand and creative intelligence run fast enough to keep us abreast with our own mounting capacity to destroy?" that is the question which we shall have to answer one way or the other in this generation. Science must help us in arriving at the answer, but main decision lies within ourselves.

1. According to the writer, the real enemy of mankind is not science but war, because

- A. science merely invents the weapons with war is fought
- B. science during war becomes destructive
- C. The weapons that science invents necessarily lead to war.
- D. The weapons invented by science do not cause war, though these it more destructive.

2. According to the writer, the main problem we are faced with is to

- A. Stop science from reflecting social forces.
- B. stop scientific activities everywhere
- C. Abolish war
- D. Prevent scientists from participating in destructive activities.

3. The expression "bring to the doorstep of doom' mean

- A. Carry close to the death and destruction
- B. Lead to the threshold of a new density.
- C. Include in a ruinous activity.
- D. Introduces to an unpredictable density.

4. Which of the following is opposite in meaning to the 'anarchy' in the middle of the passage.

- A. law and order
- B. political dominance
- C. economic prosperity
- D. communal harmony

5. Which of the following would be the most suitable title for the passage?

Sample passage 42

Bats are not, bloodthirsty monsters as portrayed in vampire films. These winged mammals groom themselves carefully like cats and only rarely carry rabies. Of the hundreds of species of bats, only three rely on blood meals. In fact, the majority eats fruit, insects, spiders, or small animals; same species gather nectar and pollen from flowers. The environmental benefits of bats are myriad. They consume an enormous number of pests, pollinate many varieties of plant life, and help reforest huge tracts of barren land by excreting millions of undigested seeds. Bats also have served as models for sophisticated navigation systems in naval and airplane technology. Living models for radar and sonar, almost all bats use echolocation to navigate, especially at night. As they fly, they a series of high - pitched squeaks at the rate of about fifty per minute. As these signals bounce off objects in their path, an echo is detected by the bats' sensitive ears that inform them of the direction, distance, and nature of obstacles so that they can undertake corrective or evasive action. Echoes are used by bats but not because of physical limitations or impairments, for bats are not blind as widely assumed. In fact, all species of bats can see, probably about as well as human beings. Another myth, about bats being aggressive, intentionally entangling themselves in the hair of human beings, is also totally unfounded. It has been shown in studies not only that bats are timid, but also that they will assiduously avoid contact with larger creatures than themselves if possible.

Aggregation during the day may vary from small groups consisting of a single male and a dozen or more females to huge colonies of many thousands or even millions of individuals, hanging upside down in caves, or in hollow trees, buildings, or other protected shelters. Within their social systems, bats assume specialized roles. Some guard the entrance to their caves, others scout for food, and still others warn the colony of approaching danger. An adult female bat usually gives birth to only one pup per year, tenderly caring for it and a nursery colony within a larger colony my provide mother bats with a safe, supportive environment in which to rear their young.

1. With which of the following statements would the author most probably agree?

- A. Bats are dirty and they carry rabies
- B. Bats are like the monsters in vampire films

C. Bats are clean, helpful members of the animal world.

D. Bats are not very important in the animal world.

2. According to the passage, what do most bats eat?

A. Blood meals

B. Fruit and insects

C. Leaves and trees

D. Large animals

3. How do bats help reforest the land?

A. By eating pests

B. By hanging upside down in trees at night

C. By excreting seeds

D. By taking evasive action

4. Which of the following is NOT characteristic of most bats?

A. They pollinate plants.

B. They have specialized roles in their colony

C. They use echolocation.

D. They eat blood.

5. According to the passage, how do bats navigate?

A. by responding to the echoes of their signals bouncing off objects

Part Four - Officer English PSC Model Question Set

PSC MODEL SET-1

Hibernation is one of the main adaptations that allow certain northern animals to survive long, cold winters. Hibernation is like a very deep sleep that allows animals to save energy when there is little or no food available. The body functions of "true hibernators" go through several changes while they are hibernating. Body temperature drops, and the heart rate slows. For example, a hibernating woodchuck's body temperature drops by more than 30 degree Celsius, and its heart rate slows from 80 to 4 beats per minute! Other true hibernators include the jumping mouse, little brown bat, eastern chipmunk, and several ground squirrels. Other animals, such as the shrew and raccoons, are not considered true hibernators as they wake up in the winter to feed, and their body functions do not change as much. Since they only sleep for a little bit of time, the term dormancy or 'light sleeping' is used to describe their behavior. The largest animals to hibernate are bears. Their heart rate slows down from usual 40-50 beats per minute to 8-12 beats per minute, but their body temperature changes very little, so they are able to wake up quickly. Hibernating animals have a special substance in the blood called hibernation inducement trigger, or HIT. This substance becomes active in the fall, when the days become cooler and shorter. When HIT becomes active, the animals start preparing for winter. Some animals store food so that they can eat when they wake up, and some animals eat a lot in late summer and fall to add excess fat to their bodies. This fat keeps them warmer and acts as a source of energy while they are sleeping. Some animals also make changes to the places where they will sleep (dens). They add leaves and grasses to keep warm.

1. Why do animals hibernate?

- A. Animals hibernate to survive long.
- B. Animals hibernate to adapt to the temperature.
- C. Animals hibernate to save energy during the winter when there is little food for them to eat.
- D. Animals hibernate to take a deep uninterrupted sleep.

2. What changes occur in the functions of an animal's body when it's hibernating?

- A. An animal's body temperature and its heart beat rise when it is hibernating.
- B. An animal's body temperature drops and its heart beat quickens when it is hibernating.
- C. An animal's body temperature drops and its heart slows when it is hibernating.
- D. An animal's body temperature drops and its heart beat remain constant when it is hibernating.

3. Why raccoons and skunks are not 'true hibernators'?

- A. Because they wake up in the winter to eat. Additionally, the changes in the functions of their bodies aren't as great.
- B. Because they sleep for a little bit of time only.
- C. Because they do not wake up in winter to feed.
- D. Because they feel hungry and get only light sleep.

4. When does HIT become active?

- A. HIT becomes active whenever the days become cooler and shorter.
- B. HIT becomes active when the hibernating animals feel cold and are short of food.
- C. HIT becomes active when winter starts in the fall.
- D. HIT becomes active in the fall, when the days are shorter and the temperature cooler

5. How do animals prepare for hibernation?

- A. To prepare for hibernation, animals store food, eat a lot to add excess fat during their hibernation.
- B. To prepare for hibernation, animals store food and eat a lot when they start hibernation.
- C. To prepare for hibernation, animals store food so that they can eat when they wake up.
- D. All of the above

PSC MODEL SET - 2

Read the following passage answer questions below.

Some animals hibernate or go into a deep sleep as an adaptation to the cold months of winter. Hibernation is different from normal sleep. During hibernation, an animal seems to be dead. Its metabolism slows down and its body temperature drops. Its heartbeat slows to only two or three beats a minute. Since its bodily processes are so slow it needs very little food to stay alive. Some animals which hibernate are toads, skunks, ground squirrels, bees, and bats. Bears sleep during the Winter, but they are not true hibernators. They wake up when they hear loud noises. Some animals estivate, or go into a deep sleep as an adaptation to the hot, dry months of summer. During estivation, an animal's heartbeat and breathing slow down. During estivation, an animal does not grow or move. It does not need to eat because it is not using much energy. Some animals burrow underground, where it is cooler, before they begin to estivate. Some animals which estivate are reptiles, bees, hedgehogs, frogs, toads, earthworms

1. Which animals both hibernate and estivate?

A. Bees B. Toads C. Bears D. Both A and B are correct.

2. Hibernation is like estivation because ...

A. Both happen in winter. B. Both are adaptations.
C. Both happen in summer. D. Both A and B are correct.

3. Animals need little food during ...

A. Estivation B. Hibernation C. Cold weather D. Both A and B are correct

4. Bears aren't true hibernators because ...

A. They wake up to loud noises B. They sleep all summer.
C. They burrow underground. D. They adapt well to heat.

5. Estivation happens during ...

- A. The cold months of winter.
C. The hot, dry months of summer,

6. For some animals, hibernation is ...

- A. An adaptation to the cold.
C. A reaction to heat

7. An animal's metabolism in the third line in the passage means

- A. Appearance in winter
C. Bodily processes

8. Estivation is

- A. A reaction to cold weather.
C. An adaptation to heat.

9. Adaptations are some of the ways that animals.....

If tree families had family trees the oak would have one of the oldest and grandest of all. There are more than 500 different species, and over the last million years they have spread, in various shapes and forms, over most of the northern half of the earth. There are mountains oaks, swamp oaks, evergreen oaks, weeping oaks and oaks on windswept cliffs that never reach more than 2 or 3 feet in height. One kind in Spain has such a spongy bark that it is used to make cork, so there are soft oaks, too. But for most of us, oak mean just one kind of tree: the tough, ragged giant that has played such a part in history and legend, and been so important in the woodlands of Europe and North America.

Perhaps we have been unfair to others trees, but the forest oaks deserve their fame. They are hardy, essay going, and not all fussy about whether they grow. They can reach a great age even thousands of years, though most are cut down long before this. Their squat trunks and twisted branches, looking like clenched wooden muscles, can stand up to the worst kinds of weather.

On top of all this, timber cut from oaks is as strong and remarkable as the trees themselves. It is solid and hard-wearing as good for furniture as it is for firewood. Before the days of steel and concrete it made the frames of houses and ships. If we had to invent a new kind of timber it would be hard to think up anything better. It isn't just human who find oaks the most useful of trees. Over the ages a huge number of animals and plants have learned to live off- and in-the oaks. It is tempting to say that a full-grown oak is like a house, but it is really more like a city- a whole community of creatures travelling working, eating, sleeping, singing, and bringing up young, on every part form the topmost spring buds to the dead gash blasted out by a lightening flash.

Read the following passage and answer the questions below.

Because goldfish can be kept easily in small ponds and aquariums, they make good pets, but like many other pets, they must have proper care and the right kind of place to live.

A two inch fish requires a minimum of two gallons of water containing sufficient oxygen to support life. Some oxygen will make its way into the water of an aquarium from the air that touches the surface. Plants in an aquarium also help to furnish oxygen. Snails help to keep an aquarium clean. Thus, with plenty of plants and snails the water in an aquarium does not have to be changed frequently. A large lake may prove to be a quite unsuitable abode for goldfish.

It is important that goldfish not be overfed. They can be fed on things as dried insects in addition to commercially prepared goldfish food, but they should never be fed more than once a day. Even then, they should not be given more food than can be consumed in about five minutes. This ensures prolonged life.

1. Which one of the following statement is correct?

A. Snails eat up the goldfish in an aquarium.

B. A large lake may not be a suitable place for goldfish.

C. Plants provide food to the snails in an aquarium.

D. Goldfish comes above the surface of water to get oxygen from air.

Read the following passage and answer the questions given below it

It was in German and France that the first successful attempts were made to produce an internal-combustion engine driven by petrol. In England people were strangely timid about horseless, vehicles. English inventors were handicapped by a quaint old law that forbade any such vehicle to attain a greater speed than four miles an hour and compelled each to be preceded by a man carrying a red flag. This law was not repealed until 1896. The earliest motor cars were looked upon as mere jokes, or as rather dangerous playthings, by everyone except their inventors. Some of them were single-seaters, others would carry two or even three people; but all were noisy, clumsy, queer-looking things. When in 1888, Carl Benz, a German, produced a three wheeled, internal-combustion car, great forward stride had been made. Another, whose name, Daimler, is often seen on motor cars to this day, was experimenting about the same time, and testing petrol driven engine.

It is easy to understand how the introduction of the petrol-driven engine revolutionized road transport throughout the world. Until then the necessary power to push a vehicle along could not be obtained without the cumbersome tanks, boilers and furnaces of the steam engine. The internal-combustion engine is light in weight and small in size by comparison; the fuel is burned in it, so that there is no waste, like the dusty cinders of a coal fire.

1. Before the invention of the internal combustion engine, in England vehicles were driven by

- A. Petrol B. Internal engine C. Horseless D. Horse

2. What made the English inventors handicapped?

PSC MODEL SET-6

Read the following passage and answer the questions below.

The stock-taking done at the first national convention on consumer protection served to highlight the areas that called for special attention to sustain the momentum of the movement as genuine forum to safeguard people's interest. Spreading awareness about the rights of the consumer and the relief upon them in case they did not get their money's worth of goods and services has rightly been identified as first priority. While this may not be a difficult task in urban areas, where the movement is concentrated at present, taking it to the vast rural hinterland calls for a multimedia approach in which radio and television have a crucial role to play. The involvement of the 500-odd consumer organizations in the country in publicizing the concept of trade practices and the remedies available against their violation will prove rewarding if the message is conveyed through village bodies.

Government efforts remain confined best to setting up the infrastructure after the formal launch of the movement with enactment of the Consumer Protection Act. The mounting backlog of cases in consumer courts, points to the need for toning up the district level redressal machinery.

The main objective of the movement is the creation of a culture that denies place, in market, for products that are not consumer friendly. This is possible only if consumer bodies take over the watchdog role preformed by the Government till now and exercise social control over the market to see that the benefits of liberalization are not reaped by traders alone. But, to make a plea to industry to exercise selfregulation and maintain minimum standards of quality and devise appropriate pricing is bound to go unheeded unless strict measures are taken to ensure compliance.

One of the greatest delusions of modern times is the prevailing belief that we are more civilized than our ancestors. At no other period in the history of mankind has the word "civilization" been so often misused and misunderstood. It is not in the abundance of material goods alone that civilization lies. Neither does it consist in the advance of scientific knowledge however amazing it may be. The inventions and discoveries of science have undoubtedly brought unheard blessings and comforts to us. But they are not civilization. What we have failed to see is that civilization is a special way of human behavior, of thought and feeling. The essential quality of civilization lies in the spirit of man, in his attitude to himself, to his fellowmen and to life as a whole. Looking everywhere around us today, we will find that man has made no progress since the dawn of history, in his attitude towards his fellowmen. On all the highest pillars in the cities of the world, you will find the figure of a conqueror or a general soldier. We know more about our killers and destroyers than about our saviors and saints. The heroes of the world are the heroes of the war.

1. According to the passage what does civilization consist of?

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

Noise, commonly defined as unwanted sound, is another environmental pollutant. Particularly in congested urban areas, the noise produced as a byproduct of our advancing technology causes physical and psychological harm, and detracts from the quality of life for those who are exposed to it.

Unlike the eye, the ear has no lid; therefore noise penetrates without protection. Loud noises instinctively signal danger to any organism with a hearing mechanism, including human beings. In response, heartbeat and respiration accelerate, blood vessels constrict, the skin pales, the muscles tense. In fact, there is a general increase in functioning brought about by the flow of adrenaline released in response to fear, and some of these responses persist even longer than the noise, occasionally as long as thirty minutes after the sound has ceased.

Because noise is unavoidable in a complex, industrial society, we are constantly responding in the same ways that we that we would respond to danger. Recently, researchers have concluded that noise and our response may be much more than an annoyance. It may be a serious threat to physical and psychological health and well-being, causing damage not only to the ear and brain but also to the heart and stomach. We have long known that hearing loss is America's number one nonfatal health problem, but now we are learning that some of us with heart disease and ulcers may be victims of noise as well. In addition, the psychic effect of noise is very important. Nervousness irritability, tension, and anxiety increase, affecting the quality of rest during sleep, and the efficiency of activities during waking hours.

Read the following passage and answer the questions

Broken friendship may be repaired but the break will always show. Friendship is a precious thing—too precious a treasure to be carelessly broken or thrown away. The world handles the word 'friend' lightly; its real true deeper meaning is forgotten.

Your friend is one who appreciates you- your fault as well as your virtues. He understands and sympathizes with your defeats and victories, your aims and ideals, your joys and temptations, your hopes and disappointments, as no one else does or can. It is your friend to whom you turn for counsel, for comfort, for praise: he may not be as learned as some or as wise as others.

Blessed is the man or woman into whose life has come the beauty and power of such a friendship. Prize it well. Do all in your power to keep such a friendship unbroken. Avoid the break, for when it comes it can be mended and the jarring notes mar the harmony.

Read the following passage and answer the questions :

While buying a house, you must be sure to have it checked for termites. A termite is much like an ant in its communal habits, although physically the two insects are distinct.

Like those of ants, termite colonies consist of different classes, each with its own particular job. The most perfectly formed termites, both male and female, make up the reproductive class. They have eyes, hard body walls, and fully developed wings. A pair of reproductive termites founds the colony. When new reproductive termites develop, they leave to form another colony. They use their wings only this one time and break them off.

The worker termites are small, blind, and wingless, with soft bodies. They make up the majority of the colony and do all the work. Soldiers are eyeless and wingless but are larger than the workers and have hard heads and strong jaws and legs. They defend the colony and are cared for by the workers.

The male and female of the reproductive class remain inside a closed in cell where the female lays thousands of eggs. The workers place the eggs in cells and care of them. Even if one colony is treated with poison, if a male and female of the reproductive class escape, they can form a new colony.

Pest control companies can inspect a house for infestation of termites. Often, a lay person cannot spot the evidence, so it is critical to have the opinion of a professional. Treatments vary depending upon the type of termite.

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

Organizations are institutions in which members compete for status and power. They compete for the resources of the organization, for example; finance to expand their own departments, for career advancement and for power to control the activities of others. In pursuit of these aims, groups are formed and sectional interests emerge. As a result, policy decisions may serve the ends of the political and career systems rather than those of the concern. In this way, the goals of the organization may be displaced in favor of sectional interests and individual ambition. These preoccupations sometimes prevent the emergence of organic systems. Many of the electronic firms in their study had recently created research and development departments employing highly qualified and well-paid scientists and technicians. Their high pay and expert knowledge were sometimes seen as a threat to the established order of rank, power and privilege. Many senior managers had little knowledge of the technicalities and possibilities of new developments and electronics. Some felt that close cooperation with the experts in an organic system would reveal their ignorance and show that their experience was now redundant.

Read the following passage and choose a correct option of each of the questions below.

It is strange that, according to his position in life, an extravagant man is admired or despised. A successful business man does nothing to increase his popularity by being careful with his money. He is expected to display his success, to have a smart car, an expensive life, and to be lavish with his hospitality. If he is not so, he is considered mean, and his reputation in business may even suffer in consequence. The paradox remains that if he had not been careful with his money in the first place, he would never have achieved his present wealth.

Among the low income group, a different set of values exists. The young clerk, who makes his wife a present of a new dress when he hasn't paid his house rent, is condemned as extravagant. Carefulness with money to the point of meanness is applauded as a virtue. Nothing in his life is considered more worthy than paying his bills. The ideal wife for such a man separates her housekeeping money into joyless little piles- so much for rent, for food, for the children's shoes; she is able to face the milkman with equanimity every month, satisfied with her economizing ways, and never knows the guilt of buying something she can't really afford.

As for myself, I fall into neither of these categories. If I have money to spare, I can be extravagant, but when, as is usually the case, I am hard up, then I am the meanest man imaginable.

PSC MODEL SET - 14

Read the following sentence and answer the questions asked below.

Culture is not merely learning. It is discrimination, understanding of life. Liberal education aims at producing moral gifts as well as intellectual, sweetness of temper as much as sanity of outlook. Into the art of living, the cultured man carries a certain grace, a certain refinement, a certain distinction which redeems him from the sterile futility of aimless struggle. Culture is not a pose of intellect or a code of convention, but an attitude of life which finds nothing human, alien, common or unclean. An education that brings up a young man in entire indifference to the misery and poverty surrounding him, to the general stringency of life, to the dumb pangs of tortured bodies and the lives submerged in the shadows, is essentially a failure. If we do not realize the solidarity of the human community, nor have human relations with those whom the world passes by as the lowly and the lost, we are not cultured.

1. Which of the following statement best expresses the theme of the passage?

- A. Culture lends grace and sanity to man
B. Culture and education are complementary to each other
C. Liberal education makes man cultured
D. Education brings man closer to life

2. According to the writer, the function of liberal education is to

- A. Change the outlook of a person
- B. Increase intellectual powers
- C. Improve a person morally
- D. Develop sensitivity to human dignity

3. Consider the following:

- A. Brotherhood of man
- B. Understanding of pain and suffering
- C. Better human relations
- D. Sweetness of temper

Which of the above expressions describe proper education?

- A. A and C
- B. B and D
- C. B, C and D
- D. All of the four

Read the following passage and choose the correct options

Read not to contradict and confute nor to believe and take for granted, nor to talk and discourse, but to weigh and consider. Some books are to be tasted others to be swallowed and some few to be chewed and digested, that is, some books are to be read only in parts; others to be read, but not curiously, some few to read wholly, and with diligence and attention. Some books may also be read by deputy, and extracts made of them others, but that would be only in the less important arguments and the meaner sort of books; else distilled books are like common distilled waters, flashy thing. Reading makes a full man, conference a ready man and writing an exact man. And writing an exact man, And therefore if a man write little, he needed have a good memory, if he confer little, he had need have a present with and if the read little he had need have much cunning to seem to know that he doth not.

PSC MODEL SET-16

Read the following passage and answer the questions asked below.

When we are suddenly confronted with any terrible danger, the change of nature we undergo is equally great. In some cases fear paralyses us. Like animals, we stand still, powerless to move a step in fright or to lift a hand in defense of our lives, and sometimes we are seized with panic and again act more like the inferior animals than rational beings that reason out.. On the other hand, frequently in cases of sudden extreme peril, which cannot be escaped by flight, and must be instantly faced, even the most timid men at once as if by miracle, become possessed of the necessary courage, sharp quick apprehension and swift decision. This is a miracle very common in nature. Man and the inferior animals are alike, when confronted with almost certain death 'gather resolution from despair' but there can really be no trace of so debilitating a feeling in the person fighting, or prepared to fight for dear life. At such times the mind is clearer than it has ever been; the nerves are steel, there is nothing felt but a wonderful strength and daring looking back at certain perilous moments in my own life, I remember them with a kind of joy, not that there was any joyful excitement then; but because they brought me a new experience- a new nature, as it were and lifted me for a time above myself.

1. The author names three different ways in which a man may react to sudden danger , are

A. He may flee in panic, or fight back or stand still

B. He may be paralyzed with fear, seized with panic or act like an inferior animal.

PSC MODEL SET-17

One of the greatest delusions of modern times is the prevailing belief that we are more civilized than our ancestors. At no other period in the history of mankind has the word "civilization" been so often misused and misunderstood. It is not in the abundance of material goods alone that civilization lies. Neither does it consist in the advance of scientific knowledge however amazing it may be. The inventions and discoveries of science have undoubtedly brought unheard blessings and comforts to us. But they are not civilization. What we have failed to see is that civilization is a special way of human behavior, of thought and feeling. The essential quality of civilization lies in the spirit of man, in his attitude to himself, to his fellowmen and to life as a whole. Looking everywhere around us today, we will find that man has made no progress since the dawn of history, in his attitude towards his fellowmen. On all the highest pillars in the cities of the world, you will find the figure of a conqueror or a general soldier. We know more about our killers and destroyers than about our saviors and saints. The heroes of the world are the heroes of the war.

The ancient Aztecs, Chinese, Greeks and Romans played games in which a ball was kicked. A game called "Futballe" was so popular in merry old England that King Henry- II (1154) became alarmed because his soldiers would neglect practicing archery. He, therefore, threatened to imprison any player and anyone on whose land the game was played. The game was against the law in England for 400 years. It was made legal during the sixteenth century. By that time archery wasn't needed because firearms were used in warfare. King James I gave the sport his blessing, praising it as a clean, honorable and manly sport.

In 1863, many British football clubs formed an association and agreed to call the game association football. It is also called soccer, a word that comes from the soc in association. Read the following passage and answer the questions asked below.

It is difficult to reconcile the ideas of different schools of thought on the question of education. Some people maintain that pupils at school should concentrate on a narrow range of subjects which will benefit them in their subsequent careers. Others contend that they should study a wide range of subjects so that they have not only the specialized knowledge necessary for their chosen careers but also sound general knowledge about the world they will have to work and live in. supporters of the first theory state that the greatest butions to civilization are made by those who are most expert in their trade or profession. It is to progress in the human sciences that we must look to undo the evils which have resulted from a knowledge of physical world hastily and superficially acquired by population unconscious of the changes in themselves that the new knowledge has imperative. The road to a happier world than any known in the past lies open before us if atavistic destructive passions can be kept in leash while the necessary adaptations are made. Fears are inevitable in time, but hopes are equally rational and far more likely to bear good fruit. We must learn to think rather less of the dangers to be avoided than of the good that will lie within our grasp if we can believe in it and let it dominate our thoughts. Science, whatever unpleasant consequences it may have by the way, is in its very nature a liberator, a liberator of bondage to physical nature and in time to come, a liberator from the weight of destructive passions. We are on the threshold of utter disaster or unprecedently glorious achievement. No previous age has been fraught with problems so momentous; and it is to science that we must look to for a happy future.

The object underlying the rules of natural justice “is to prevent miscarriage of justice” and secure “fair play in action” As pointed out earlier the requirement about recording of reasons for its decision by an administrative authority exercising quasi-judicial functions achieves his object by excluding changes of arbitrariness and ensuring a degree of fairness in the process of decision making. Keeping in view the expanding horizon of the principle of natural justice which govern exercise of power by administrative authorities. The rules of natural justice are not embodied rules. The extent of their application depends upon the particularly statutory framework where under jurisdiction has been conferred on the administrative authority. with regard to the exercise of particular power by an administrative authority including exercise of judicial or quasi-judicial functions the legislature, while conferring the said power, may feel that it would not be in the larger public interest that the reasons for the order passed by the administrative authority be recorded in the order and be communicated to the aggrieved party and it may dispense with such a requirement.

The pioneers of the teaching of science imagined that its introduction into education would remove the conventionality, artificiality, and backwardlookingness which were characteristic of classical studies, but they were gravely disappointed. So, too, in their time had the humanists thought that the study of the classical authors in the original would banish at once the dull pedantry and superstition of mediaeval scholasticism. The professional schoolmaster was a match for both of them, and has almost managed to make the understanding of chemical reactions as dull and as dogmatic an affair as the reading of Virgil's Aeneid.

The chief claim for the use of science in education is that it teaches a child something about the actual universe in which he is living, in making him acquainted with the results of scientific discovery, and at the same time teaches him how to think logically and inductively by studying scientific method. A certain limited success has been reached in the first of these aims, but practically none at all in the second. Those privileged members of the community who have been through a secondary or public school education may be expected to know something about the elementary physics and chemistry of a hundred years ago, but they probably know hardly more than any bright boy can pick up from an interest in wireless or scientific hobbies out of school hours. As to the learning of scientific method, the whole thing is palpably a farce. Actually, for the convenience of teachers and the requirements of the examination system, it is necessary that the pupils not only do not learn scientific method but learn precisely the reverse, that is, to believe exactly what they are told and to reproduce it when asked, whether it seems nonsense to them or not.

The way in which educated people respond to such quackeries as spiritualism or astrology, not to say more dangerous ones such as racial theories or currency myths, shows that fifty years of education in the method of science in Britain or Germany has produced no visible effect whatever. The only way of learning the method of science is the long and bitter way of personal experience, and, until the educational or social systems are altered to make this possible, the best we can expect is the production of a minority of people who are able to acquire some of the techniques of science and a still smaller minority who are able to use and develop them.

PSC MODEL SET-23

1. Read the following Passage and respond the questions given.

A sanctuary may be defined as a place where Man is passive and the rest of Nature active. Till quite recently Nature had her own sanctuaries, where man either did not go at all or only as a tool using animal in comparatively small numbers. But now, in this machinery age, there is no place left where man cannot go with overwhelming forces at his command. He can strangle to death all the nobler wild life in the world to-day. To-morrow he certainly will have done so, unless he exercises due foresight and self-control in the meantime.

There is not the slightest doubt that birds and mammals are now being killed off much faster than they can breed. And it is always the largest and noblest forms of life that suffer most. The whales and elephants, lions and eagles, go. The rats and flies, and all mean parasites, remain. This is inevitable in certain cases. But it is wanton killing off that I am speaking of to-night. Civilized man begins by destroying the very forms of wild life he learns to appreciate most when he becomes still more civilized. The obvious remedy is to begin conservation at an earlier stage, when it is easier and better in every way, by enforcing laws for close seasons, game preserves, the selective protection of certain species, and sanctuaries.

I have just defined a sanctuary as a place where man is passive and the rest of Nature active. But this general definition is too absolute for any special case. The mere fact that man has to protect a sanctuary does away with his purely passive attitude. Then, he can be beneficially active by destroying pests and parasites, like bot-flies or mosquitoes, and by finding antidotes for diseases like the epidemic which periodically kills off the rabbits and thus starves many of the carnivora to death. But, except in cases where experiment has proved his intervention to be beneficial, the less he upsets the balance of Nature the better, even when he tries to be an earthly Providence.

1. The author implies that his first definition of a sanctuary is

- A. totally wrong B. somewhat idealistic C. unhelpful D. indefensible

2. The author's argument that destroying bot-flies and mosquitoes would be a beneficial action is most weakened by all of the following except

- A. parasites have an important role to play in the regulation of populations
B. the elimination of any species can have unpredictable effects on the balance of nature
C. the pests themselves are part of the food chain

I tend, as a reader, to prize and admire clarity; precision, plainness, lucidity, and the sort of magical compression that enriches instead of vitiates. Someone's ability to write this way, especially in nonfiction, fills me with envy, and awe. That might help explain why a fair number of Best American Essay pieces tend to be short, terse, and informal in usage/syntax. Readers who enjoy noodling about genre might welcome the news that several of this year's Best Essays are arguably more like causeries or propos than like essays per se, although one could counter argue that these pieces tend, in their essential pithiness, to be closer to what's historically been meant by 'essay.' Personally, I find taxonomic arguments like this dull and irrelevant. What does seem relevant is to assure you that none of the shorter essays in the collection were included merely because they were short. Limpidity, compactness, and an absence of verbal methane were simply part of what made these pieces valuable; and I think I tried, as the Decider, to use overall value as the prime triage - and filtering mechanism in selecting this year's top essays.

Werner Hoeflich spent the evening at his catering job, making white-wine spritzers and mixing vodka with Tab in a spacious apartment overlooking Central Park. There were orchids, thick rugs, a dog with long blond hair: He walked home late from the subway afterward, along the gated and padlocked streets of the Upper East Side. The trees on his block were scrawny and impervious, like invalid aunts.

Once he had seen a parakeet in one of those trees, staring down at him, shifting from foot to foot. The bird had sharpened both sides of its beak on the branch and then made a veering, panicky flight to a windowsill far above. Most of Werner's metaphorical moments were painterly - the juxtaposing of the wild bird and the tame tree, the shimmer of the periwinkle, the splurt of titanium white that fell from it onto the pavement. He loved New York for its simple surprises, although in truth, Oregon and Iowa and Arizona and everywhere else had simple surprises as well. Cantaloupe-colored sunrises, banded cows, Dairy Queens, all kinds of things that didn't include black plastic mountains of trash and the smell of dog urine

1. The author of the passage is primarily concerned with

- A. Educating readers about literary genres.

PSC MODEL SET-26

Read the Following Passage and answer the questions

The net result suggested by the police statistics is that we inflict atrocious injuries on the burglars we catch in order to make the rest take effectual precautions against detection; so that instead of saving our diamonds from burglary we only greatly decrease our chances of ever getting them back, and increase our chances of being shot by the robber. But the thoughtless wickedness with which we scatter sentences of imprisonment is as nothing compared to the stupid levity with which we tolerate poverty as if it were either a wholesome tonic for lazy people or else a virtue to be embraced as St. Francis embraced it. If a man is indolent, let him be poor. If he is drunken, let him be poor. If he is not a gentleman, let him be poor. If he is addicted to the fine arts or to pure science instead of to trade and finance, let him be poor. If he chooses to spend his wages on his beer and his family instead of saving it up for his old age, let him be poor. Let nothing be done for "the undeserving": let him be poor. Serve him right! Also -- somewhat inconsistently -- blessed are the poor!

1. The passage is most probably intended to

- A. serve as an introduction to a more detailed discussion of poverty
- B. censure imprisonment as a punitive measure
- C. analyze the possible repercussions of social evils
- D. continue a prior discussion of strong measures against social evils

- A. most people don't realize that by punishing offenders they are surrendering themselves to the vicious cycle of crime and punishment
- B. sentences of imprisonment have little success in reducing the crime rate in society
- C. it would be ridiculous to inoculate people suffering from chicken pox with small pox
- D. if criminals were not strongly punished for their misdeeds there would be no law and order in society

3. The author's argument about imprisonment would be most weakened by showing that

- A. imprisonment is not widely regarded as an act of cruelty
- B. chicken pox and burglary are not analogous evils
- C. imprisonment does not cause malicious injury
- D. sentences of imprisonment are given increasingly rarely

4. The author apparently believes that people at the time he wrote the passage were

- A. inclined to consider poverty a social evil

Read the Following Passage and answer the questions

When another old cave is discovered in the south of France, it is not usually news. Rather, it is an ordinary event. Such discoveries are so frequent these days that hardly anybody pays heed to them. However, when the Lascaux cave complex was discovered in 1940, the world was amazed. Painted directly on its walls were hundreds of scenes showing how people lived thousands of years ago. The scenes show people hunting animals, such as bison or wild cats. Other images depict birds and, most noticeably, horses, which appear in more than 300 wall images, by far outnumbering all other animals. Early artists drawing these animals accomplished a monumental walls but carried their painting materials to spaces that required climbing steep walls or crawling into narrow passages in the Lascaux complex. Unfortunately, the paintings have been exposed to the destructive action of water and temperature changes, which easily wear the images away. Because the Lascaux caves have many entrances, air movement has also damaged the images inside. Although they are not out in the open air, where natural light would have destroyed them long ago, many of the images have deteriorated and are barely recognizable. To prevent further damage, the site was closed to tourists in 1963, 23 years after it was discovered.

PSC MODEL SET-28

Read the following passage and choose the best answer:

Let children learn to judge their own work. A child learning to talk does not learn by being corrected all the time: if corrected too much, he will stop talking. He notices a thousand times a day the difference between the language he uses and the language those around him use. Bit by bit, he makes the necessary changes to make his language like other people's. In the same way, children learning to do all the other things, they learn to do without being taught - to walk, run, climb, whistle, ride a bicycle - compare their own performances with those of more skilled people, and slowly make the needed changes. But in school we never give a child a chance to find out his mistakes for himself, let alone correct them. We do it all for him. We act as if we thought that he would never notice a mistake unless it was pointed out to him, or correct it unless he was made to. Soon he becomes dependent on the teacher. Let him do it himself. Let him work out, with the help of other children if he wants it, what this word says, what the answer is to that problem, whether this is a good way of saying or doing this or not. If it is a matter of right answer, as it may be in mathematics or science, give him the answer book. Let him correct his own papers. Why should we teachers waste time on such routine work? Our job should be to help the child when he tells us that he can't find the way to get the right answer. Let's end all this nonsense of grades, exams, marks. Let us throw them all out, and let the children learn what all educated persons must some day learn, how to measure their own understanding, how to know what they know or do not know.

Let them get on with this job in the way that seems most sensible to them, with our help as school teachers if they ask for it. The idea that there is a body of knowledge to be learnt at school and used for the rest of one's life is nonsense in a world as complicated and rapidly changing as ours. Anxious parents and teachers say, "But suppose they fail to learn something essential, something they will need to get on in the world?" Don't worry. If it is essential, they will go out into the world and learn it.

1: What does the author think is the best way for children to learn things?

PSC MODEL SET-29

Did you know that if you want your pet cat to live as long as possible you should choose an ordinary female cat, keep a close eye on her in spring and summer, and make sure that she is not black or black and white? It has been discovered that male cats wander further from home, and of large number of cats killed on the roads in spring and summer, a surprisingly high percentage are black or black and white.

Did you know, too, that domestic cats regard their owners as fellow members of the cat family and make many more sounds to us than they do to other cats when living in groups? They have worked out that we communicate by sound - and so learn a vocabulary we will understand to get their message over.

The way cats have learned to live with, and be looked after by man, without losing their hunting and killing abilities or their mental independence, is a good reason for studying them some scientists say.

A study of the suburban cats in Barking in Essex showed that outside the home they adopted the same hunting and exploring habits as wild cats, the female cats covered a territory limited to house and garden, while male cats travelled over an area ten times as large.

Though many people think the opposite, a cat is very practical about defending its territory. Its attitude depends on its confidence about the cat it faces following the experience of its previous meetings.

Females and young males often hide when fierce adult males turn up on their territory.

Female cats seem to feel no tension between their affectionate relationships with humans and their life "in the wild". It is the male cats which occasionally show signs of anxiety indicating that they are suffering from strain.

1. Why do cats make a wider range of sounds when communicating with people?

Read the following passage and choose the best answer:

The Times is not an easy paper to read. It would mean little to the two million adults in Britain who cannot even read more popular papers. It would also be difficult to understand for many to whom English is a second language. Yet even those who read The Times easily and with pleasure might have difficulty with official forms, leaflets and legal agreements. Ordinary people's lives are governed by forms and noticed from the moment their birth is registered until the day they die. Yet many can make no sense of the words on the bits of papers. It is 33 years since Sir Ernest Gowers wrote a book called Plain Words to guide civil servants in writing clear English. Sadly, officials who are writing now do not seem to have read the book. They excuse the fact that much of what they write cannot be understood by arguing that complicated schemes must have complicated explanations. They also claim readers would think it an insult to their intelligence to be addressed in simple English.

They think long words and fine phrases make what they have to say seem more important. They do not care very much if customers and clients remain ignorant. Public ignorance makes their job easier.

As a result we have forms that even people who can read well cannot fill in correctly. Important agreements are based on unreadable small print. Warning notices on dangerous materials are printed so small that few people would and understand them before an accident, let alone after it.

The legal pressure on businesses to use simpler language has made difference, even if lawyers and counts themselves still use the language ordinary people cannot read. Companies can now make big profits from simplifying the language of contracts and complicated documents for fees of up to 10,000 for each job. In Britain an organisation called The Plain English Movement was set up in Martin Cutts and Chrissi Maher. They started by producing a newspaper in Liverpool for adults who had difficulty in reading. Then they ran an advice centre in Salford, simplifying forms and leaflets for people claiming unemployment and sickness benefits. The Movement has had some successes. Not least that simplifying such leaflets to four pages with sentences averaging only 10 words has saved millions of pieces of paper a year.

1. Why is it important to simplify official language, according to the text?

- A. So that Times readers can understand it.
B. Because it takes too long to produce the present paperwork.
C. Because everyone needs to understand it.

D. To support the Plain English Movement.

2. Why does the writer mention Plain Words?

- A. Because he does not approve of the work of civil servants.
- B. Because he thinks today's civil servants should read it.
- C. To show where the Plain English Movement took its ideas from.
- D. To celebrate in important publication.

3. Civil servants say they use complicated language because

- A. they do not wish to show their own ignorance.
- B. it is not part of their training to read Plain Words.
- C. people do not expect to understand every word of official language.
- D. the language must be difficult if the contents is complex.

4. The aim of the Plain English Movement is to

- A. encourage the use of simple written English in public life.
- B. make money by simplifying contracts and complicated documents.
- C. produce a newspaper in Liverpool for adults with reading difficulties.
- D. run advice centres throughout Britain.

5. According to the text, one result of the Plain English Movement has been to

- A. simplify the language of lawyers and courts.
- B. help people to read the small print of agreements.
- C. reduce the cost of producing leaflets.
- D. help many more people get benefit payments.

Having reached the highest point of our route according to plan we discovered something the map had not told us. It was impossible to climb down into the King valley. The river lay deep between mountain sides that were almost vertical. We couldn't find any animal tracks, which usually show the best way across country, and the slopes were covered so thickly with bushes that we could not see the nature of the ground. We had somehow to break through to the river which would give us our direction out of the mountain into the inhabited lowlands.

Our guide cut a narrow path through the bushes with his long knife and we followed in single file. Progress was slow. Then, when we thought we had really reached the river, we found ourselves instead on the edge of a cliff with a straight drop of 1,000 feet to the water below. We climbed back up the slope and began to look for another way down. We climbed, slipped, sweated and scratched our hands to pieces and finally arrived at the river. Happily we strode downhill along its bank without having to cut a way. However, after a few miles the river entered a steep-sided gap between rocks and suddenly dropped thirty-five feet over a waterfall. There was no path alongside it and no way round it.

Then one of the guides saw a way of overcoming the difficulty. There was a fallen tree lying upside down over the waterfall with its leafy top resting on the opposite bank below the falls. Without hesitation he climbed down the slippery trunk to show us how easy it was. Having got to the fork of the tree, he moved hand over hand along a branch for four or five feet with his legs hanging in space, then he dropped onto the flat bank the other side, throwing his arms in the air like a footballer who has scored a goal, and cheerfully waving us on.

PSC MODEL SET-32

Read the following passage and respond the questions:

The 'Neighbourhood Watch' scheme all started a few years ago in the quiet village of Mollington after a number of burglaries in the village and the - surrounding area. The residents of the village came up with the idea that they themselves could keep an eye on their neighbours' property while they were away on holiday. Since then, and with the support of the government and police, more than 50,000 "Neighbour Watch' schemes have been set up all over the country.

The object of each 'Watch' group is to reduce the opportunities that criminals have in any particular street or area. Each resident who is a member of the scheme agrees to call the police whenever they see something suspicious. Everything is done calmly and discreetly-it is the police who actually check out each report and investigate what is happening. Residents who are part of the 'Watch' are not supposed to act as police or put themselves in any danger.

When a new Neighbourhood Watch scheme is set up in an area, the first thing people notice, is the large, brightly colored 'Neighbourhood Watch' sign. This is a great deterrent to most burglars and vandals, because very few of them will take a chance of breaking into someone's house if they know that there is a high risk of being seen by neighbours keeping a looking-out, Burglars also know that people who are part of 'Neighbour Watch' schemes are more likely to have fitted good locks to their doors and windows.

There's another benefit too. In the time since the 'Neighbourhood Watch' scheme came into existence, there is growing evidence of a new community spirit. It is bringing people together as never before, and encouraging people to care for each other. New friendships are being made, and contact is often established with old people living on their own, who are often the most frightened and the most at risk.

Read the following passage and choose the best answer:

Through a series of experiments an American scientist has obtained an understanding of the social structure of the most complex of ant societies. The ants examined are the only creatures other than man to have given up hunting and collecting for a completely agricultural way of life. In their underground nests they cultivate gardens on soil made from finely chopped leaves. This is a complex operation requiring considerable division of labour. The workers of this type of ant can be divided into four groups according to size. Each of the groups performs a particular set of jobs.

The making and care of the gardens and the nursing of the young ants are done by the smallest workers. Slightly larger workers are responsible for chopping up leaves to make them suitable for use in the gardens and for cleaning the nest. A third group of still larger ants do the construction work and collect fresh leaves from outside the nest.

The largest are the soldier ants, responsible for defending the nest. To find out how good the various size groups are at different tasks the scientist measured the amount of work done by the ants against the amount of energy they used. He examined first the gathering and carrying of leaves. He selected one of the size-groups, and then measured how efficiently these ants could find leaves and run back to the nest. Then he repeated the experiment for each of the other size groups. In this way he could see whether any group could do the job more efficiently than the group normally undertaking it.

The intermediate-sized ants that normally perform this task proved to be the most efficient for their energy costs, but when the scientist examined the whole set of jobs performed by each group of ants it appeared that some sizes of worker ants were not ideally suited to the particular jobs they performed

Read the following passage and choose the best answer:

I tend, as a reader, to prize and admire clarity, precision, plainness, lucidity, and the sort of magical compression that enriches instead of vitiates. Someone's ability to write this way, especially in nonfiction, fills me with envy, and awe. That might help explain why a fair number of Best American Essay pieces tend to be short, terse, and informal in usage/syntax. Readers who enjoy noodling about genre might welcome the news that several of this year's Best Essays are arguably more like causeries or propos than like essays per se, although one could counter argue that these pieces tend, in their essential pithiness, to be closer to what's historically been meant by 'essay.' Personally, I find taxonomic arguments like this dull and irrelevant. What does seem relevant is to assure you that none of the shorter essays in the collection were included merely because they were short. Limpidity, compactness, and an absence of verbal methane were simply part of what made these pieces valuable; and I think I tried, as the Decider, to use overall value as the prime triage - and filtering mechanism in selecting this year's top essays.

Werner Hoeflich spent the evening at his catering job, making white-wine spritzers and mixing vodka with Tab in a spacious apartment overlooking Central Park. There were orchids, thick rugs, a dog with long blond hair. He walked home late from the subway afterward, along the gated and padlocked streets of the Upper East Side. The trees on his block were scrawny and impervious, like invalid aunts.

Once he had seen a parakeet in one of those trees, staring down at him, shifting from foot to foot. The bird had sharpened both sides of its beak on the branch and then made a veering, panicky flight to a windowsill far above. Most of Werner's metaphorical moments were painterly - the juxtaposing of the wild bird and the tame tree, the shimmer of the periwinkle, the splurt of titanium white that fell from it onto the pavement. He loved New York for its simple surprises, although in truth, Oregon and Iowa and

Arizona and everywhere else had simple surprises as well. Cantaloupe-colored sunrises, banded cows, Dairy Queens, all kinds of things that didn't include black plastic mountains of trash and the smell of dog urine.

1. The author of the passage is primarily concerned with

PSC MODEL SET-35

Read the following questions and answer the questions.

Although they are in inexpensive the supply of vitamins, minerals, and high quality protein, eggs also contain a high level of blood cholesterol, one of the major causes of heart disease. One egg yolk, in fact, contains a little more than two thirds of the suggested daily cholesterol limit. This knowledge has caused egg sales to plummet in recent years, which in turn has brought about the development of several alternatives to eating regular eggs. One alte eggs. These egg substitutes are not really eggs, but they look somewhat like eggs when they are cooked. They have the advantage of having lower cholesterol rates, and they can be scrambled or used in baking. One disadvantage however, is that they are not good for frying, poaching, or boiling .A second alternative to regular eggs is a new type of egg, sometimes called "designer eggs. These eggs are produced by hens that are fed low fat diets consisting of ingredients such as canola, flax, and rice bran. In spite of these diets, however, these hens produce eggs that contain the same amount of cholesterol as regular eggs. Yet the producers of these eggs claim that eating their eggs will not raise the blood cholesterol in humans.

Egg producers claim that their product has been portrayed unfairly. They seek scientific studies to take up their claim and in fact, studies on the relationship between eggs and human cholesterol levels have brought mixed results. It may be that it is not the of egg that is the main determinant of cholesterol but the person who is eating the eggs. Some people may be more sensitive to cholesterol derived from food than other people. In fact, there is evidence that certain dietary fats stimulate the body's production of blood cholesterol. Consequently, while it still makes sense to limit one's intake of eggs, even designer eggs, it seems that doing this without regulating dietary fat will probably not help to reduce the blood cholesterol level.

1. What is the main purpose of the passage?

A. to inform people about the relationship between eggs and cholesterol
B. to convince people to eat designer" eggs and egg substinites
C. to persuade people that eggs are unhealthy and should not be caten
D. to introduce the idea that dietary fat increases the blood cholesterol level

2. According to the passage, what has been the cause for the drop in the sale of eggs?

A. the development of several alternatives to eating regular eggs
B. Due to decreased production
C. Due to increasing use of design eggs
D. Egg yoll being high in cholesterol

3. What does the author mean by the phrase "mixed results" in line 15?

A. the results are confirmed B. the results are inconclusive

TEST YOURSELF PASSAGE-1

Read the following passage and answer the questions asked below

At Burdwan, we were told, "Third class tickets are not booked so early." I went to the station master. He also gave the same reply. As soon as the booking window opened, might was right and passengers, ahead of others and indifferent to others, coming one after another, continued to push me out. I was, therefore, about the last of the first crowd to get a ticket.

The train arrived and getting into it was another trial. I went to the guard. He said, "You must try to get in where you can, or take the next train." Much against my wishes, I got into an inter-class compartment with my wife. The guard got us getting in. At Asansol station he came to charge excess fare. I said to him "It was your duty to find us room. We could not get any, and so are sitting here." "You may not argue with me." said the guard, "I cannot accommodate you. You may pay excess fare or get out." I wanted to reach Pune somehow, so I paid the demanded excess fare, but resented the injustice. The woes of thirdclass passengers are undoubtedly due to the high-handedness of railway authorities. But the rudeness, dirty habits, selfishness and ignorance of the passengers themselves are no less to blame. The pity is that they often do not realize that they are behaving badly, dirtily or selfishly. They believe that everything they do is in the natural way. All this may be traced to the indifference towards them of us 'educated people'.

1. The author travelled by inter-class because

- A. The inter-class compartment was comfortable
- B. The inter-class compartment was not crowded
- C. He could not get into a third-class compartment
- D. The guard charged him the inter-class fare

2. The author had to pay excess fare because

- A. The guard had seen him entering the inter-class compartment
- B. He was travelling by a class higher than the one he was entitled to
- C. He intended to travel up to Pune
- D. The third class compartment was crowded

3. The passage is mainly concerned with the

- A. Woes of third-class passengers
- B. Rudeness of railway servants
- C. Crowded trains
- D. Indifference of educated servants

4. According to the author, the hardship of third class passengers will be minimized if

- A. There was provision for more third class compartments
- B. Passengers were allowed to travel inter-class compartments were overcrowded
- C. Trains stopped at the station for a long time to enable passengers to enter third-class compartments
- D. Railway authorities show genuine concern for the passengers

5. How many stations are mentioned in the passage?

- A. One
- B. two
- C. three
- D. five

Read the following passage and answer the question asked below

It was August 6, 1945 Hiroshima was first atom-bombed, symbolizing man's nightmare and his greatest dream, the night mare of a nuclear war, and the dream of genuine and lasting peace. Beginning with the survivor of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the awareness of the danger and the sentiment for disarmament and peace has become universal, transcending and national and ideological barriers. And yet more deadly nuclear weapons are being piled on the top of the heap, that is enough to wipe out all traces of life from this planet .Forty years after Hiroshima, there is no light at the end of the tunnel - only occasional flickers. The arms limitation talks between the superpowers who hold the key to disarmament and peace, have yielded nothing so far.

The main responsibility for suppressing the nuclear threat is that of the superpowers. However, other powers also have nuclear weapons and they must share the responsibility. And not only they, but those nations which have or are developing nuclear capacity must see the issues in a longer term and larger perspective.

Nuclear war like peace is not divisible. Agreement on disarmament at the superpower level is essential. But, it must be followed by similar agreements on the bilateral and regional level, for all of us are in a sense the citizens of Hiroshima.

1. August 6, 1945 is a significant date in the history because it was on this dates that:

- A. a peace treaty was signed
- B. the second world war came to an end
- C. a nuclear weapon was used for the first time
- D. Japan surrendered to Allies

2. The atom bomb has produced a nightmarish effect on nations because of:

- A. the possibility of destruction of a whole civilization.
- B. it is potential for unabashed arms race
- C. the threat to peace from the powers that could produce such powers.
- D. their awareness of man's defenselessness against such powers.

3. The super powers are trying to counter the dangers of a nuclear way by:

- A. discontinuing nuclear tests
- B. withholding financial aid to nations trying to go nuclear
- C. holding talks on peace and disarmaments
- D. trying to stop making nuclear weapons

4. The author thinks that negotiations for the control of nuclear arms have made

- A. little progress
- B. tremendous progress
- C. constrictive suggestions
- D. contingency plans to stop the disasters

5. According to the author:

- A. superpowers should shoulder the responsibility of controlling nuclear war.
- B. developing nations should hold talks for disarmament
- C. other powers that have nuclear capability should join hands with superpowers to retrain potential nuclear powers
- D. a nuclear disarmament agreement at the superpower level should be followed by similar agreement at the bilateral and regional level

TEST YOURSELF PASSAGE-3

Read the following passage and tick the right options:

Bats are not, bloodthirsty monsters as portrayed in vampire films. These winged mammals groom themselves carefully like cats and only rarely carry rabies. Of the hundreds of species of bats, only three rely on blood meals. In fact, the majority eats fruit, insects, spiders, or small animals; some species gather nectar and pollen from flowers. The environmental benefits of bats are myriad. They consume an enormous number of pests, pollinate many varieties of plant life, and help reforest huge tracts of barren land by excreting millions of undigested seeds.

Bats also have served as models for sophisticated navigation in naval and airplane technology. Living models for radar and sonar, almost all bats use echolocation to navigate, especially at night. As they fly, they emit a series of high-pitched squeaks at the rate of about fifty per minute. As these signals bounce off objects in their path, an echo is detected by the bats' sensitive ears that inform them of the direction, distance, and nature of obstacles so that they can undertake corrective or evasive action. Echoes are used by bats but not because of physical limitations or impairments, for bats are not blind as widely assumed. In fact, all species of bats can see, probably about as well as human beings. Another myth, about bats being aggressive, intentionally entangling themselves in the hair of human beings, is also totally unfounded. It has been shown in studies not only that bats are timid, but also that they will assiduously avoid contact with large creatures than themselves if possible.

1. With which of the following statements would the author most probably agree?

- A. Bats are dirty and they carry rabies
- B. Bats are like the monsters in vampire films
- C. Bats are clean, helpful members of the animal world
- D. Bats are not very important in the animal world

2. How do bats help reforest the land

- A. By eating pests
- B. By hanging upside down in trees at night
- C. by excreting seeds
- D. by taking evasive action

3. Which of the following is not characteristic of most bats?

- A. They pollinate plants
- B. They have specialized roles in the colony
- C. They use echolocation
- D. They eat blood meals

4. According to the passage, how do bats navigate?

- A. By responding to the echoes of their signals bouncing off objects
- B. By warning the colony of approaching danger with high squeaks
- C. By beating their wings fifty times per minute
- D. By using their sensitive ears to hear the noises in their environment

5. Based on the passage, which of the following statements is not true about bats?

- A. Bats are not blood thirsty.
- B. Bats are violent.
- C. Bats are timid
- D. Bats can see as well as human beings.

TEST YOURSELF PASSAGE - 4

Read the following passage and tick the right option:

The greatest enemy of mankind, as people have discovered, is not science, but war. Science merely reflects the prevailing social forces. It is found that, when there is peace, science is constructive, when there is war; science is preserved to destructive ends. The weapon which science gives us to not necessarily causes war; they make war increasing terrible. Till now, it has brought to the doorstep of doom. Our main problem, therefore, is not to curb science, but to stop war-to substitute law for force, and international government for anarchy in the relation of one nation with another. That is job in which everybody must participate, including the scientist. But the bombing of Hiroshima suddenly woke up to the fact we have very little time. The hour is late and our work has scarcely begun. Now we are face to face with an urgent questions- "can education and tolerance, understand and creative intelligence run fast enough to keep us abreast with our own mounting capacity to destroy?" that is the question which we shall have to answer one way or the other in this generation. Science must help us in arriving at the answer. but main decision ftes witirin ourselves.

1. According to the writer, the real enemy of mankind is not science but war, because

- A. Science merely invents the weapons with war is.
- B. Science during war is destructive
- C. The weapons that science invents necessarily leads to war
- D. The weapons invented by science do not cause war, though these are more destructive

2. According to the writer, the main problem we are faced with is to

- A. Stop science from reflecting social forces.
- B. Stop scientific activities everywhere
- C. Abolish war
- D. Prevent scientists from participating in destructive activities

3. The expression bring to the door step of doom' means

- A. Carry close to the death and destructive activities.
- B. Lead to the threshold of a new density
- C. Include in a ruinous activity
- D. Introduce to an unpredictable density

4. Which of the following is opposite in meaning to the 'anarchy' in the middle of the passage

- A. Law and order .
- B. Economic prosperity
- C. political dominance
- D. communal harmony

5. Which of the following would be the most suitable title for the passage?

- A. Science and social force
- B. Science and the horrors of war
- C. science and world peace
- D. science and the new generatio

Part Five - PSC Question of English : 2070-2075

PSC QUESTIONS OF ENGLISH: 2070

Three-fourths of the surface of our planet is covered by the sea, which both separates and unites the various races of mankind, the sea is the great highway along which man may journey at his will, the great road that has no walls or hedges hemming it in, and that nobody has to keep it in good repair with the aid of pickaxes and barrels of tar and steamrollers. The sea appeals to man's love of the perilous and the unknown, to this love of conquest, his love of knowledge, and his love of gold. It's green, grey, blue and purple water calls to him and bid him fare forth in quest of fresh fields. Beyond their horizon he has found danger and death, glory and gain.

In some great continents such as America and Australia, there are towns and villages many thousands of miles from the coast, whose children have never seen or heard - or felt - the waves of the sea. But in the British Isles it is nowhere much more than a hundred miles from the most inland spot. The love of the sea is in the very blood of the British people.

PSC QUESTIONS OF ENGLISH: 2071

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow:

Throughout human history there have been many stringent taboos concerning watching other people eat or eating in the presence of others. There have been attempts to explain these taboos in terms of inappropriate social relationship either between those who are involved and those who are not simultaneously involved in the satisfaction of bodily need or between those who are already satiated and those who appear to be shamelessly gorging. Undoubtedly such elements exist in the taboo but there is an additional element with a much more fundamental importance. In pre-historic times when food was so precious and the on-lookers, so hungry, not to offer half of the little food one had was unthinkable. Since every glance was a plea for life. Further during those times people existed in nuclear or extended family groups and the sharing of the food was literally supporting one's family or by extension, preserving one's self.

1. In support of the argument in the passage about the validity of taboos against eating in the presence of the others, who are not eating, would imply that the society.

PSC QUESTIONS OF ENGLISH: 2072

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

Ordinary men and women are, for the most part, aware that there are many matters as to which their own personal judgment is not wholly trustworthy. They look about the world anxiously for founts of wisdom, and by placing their trust in them they arrive at a comfortable certainty. Savages trusted the medicine man, who by slow stages developed into the priest. The priest is being succeeded by the physician by the man of science. The man of science in general (though there are honorable exceptions) is nothing loath to take up the position which the public offers him. He is willing to make pronouncements about the laziness of the wage-earning classes, the superiority of the Nordic races, the eugenic superiority of the rich, and any other topics that may at the moment be of political interest.

For the genuine man of science I have the highest possible respect. He is the one force in modern world at once genuinely constructive and profoundly revolutionary. When the man of science is dealing with technical matters that do not touch upon the prejudices which he shares with the average man, he is more likely to be right than anyone else. But unfortunately very few men of science are able to retain their impartiality when they come to matters about which they feel strong. For example, every male student of the human brain is persuaded in advance that men's brains are better than women's. When it was found that the average weight of a man's brain is greater than that of a woman's, this was held as proof of his superior intellectuality. When it was pointed out that elephant's brain is even heavier, the eminent scientists scratched their heads since they could not add that their wits were elephantine. Somebody suggested that the important thing is the proportion of weight of the body. But this had a disastrous result. It seemed too show that women were, on the whole, cleverer than men. This would never do. So they said that it was not mere brute weight mattered but delicacy of organization. As this was still a matter of conjecture, it could be assumed to be better in men than in women.

1. Which of the following statements carries the main idea of the first paragraph?

- A. Ordinary men and women are aware of the inadequacy in their judgment.
B. The man of science makes statements about the laziness of wage-earners.
C. The scientist of today tends to make pronouncements of political interest.
D. The medicine man ultimately turns out to be a scientist through slow transformation.

2. According to this author the genuine man of science is:

- A. At once genuinely constructive and profoundly revolutionary.
B. The man who is willing to make pronouncements about political matters.
C. The one who thinks of himself as superior to others.
D. An impartial man without prejudices.

3. The fact that man's brain is heavier than women's proves:

- A. Man is more intellectual than woman.
B. Any animal whose brain is heavier is more intellectual.
C. That human wit is elephantine because elephant's brain is heavier.
D. That it was simply an assumption which cannot probably be justified scientifically.

4. The reason for the statement that personal judgment is not wholly trustworthy is:

- A. That many matters have scientific grounds B. That man's wisdom is faulty.
C. That a man changes through time. D. That the people of wage-earning classes are lazy.

5. The scientist cannot be perfectly scientific because:

- A. He or she can have little knowledge about the world.
B. He or she is a person of strong feeling.
C. He or she follows something on the basis of impressions.
D. He or she is skeptic and thus never arrives at conclusion.

PSC QUESTIONS OF ENGLISH: 2074

Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow.

Admiration of great men, both of our own time and of the past, is a valuable emotion and stimulus to useful activity. To young men of vigour and enterprise, the achievements predecessors are an encouragement and a proof of what is possible to achieve. But if this good effects is to result from admiration, it is necessary that the men who are admired should be regarded as something that is possible to equal by means of sufficient exertion, not as something outside our capacity. It is possible to use the great Men of the past as an excuse for laziness by assuming that what they thought was perfect set for all time and need never be re-examined.

The attitude is defended by those who adopt it, who call it 'reverence and condemn all modern initiative as disrespectful. 'Reverence in this sense has been a misfortune to the human race.

One of the most outstanding example of the harm done by excessive reverence is the influence of Aristotle .For a brief period, in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, when the west rediscovered him through contact with the Arabs, his writing acted as an intellectual stimulus. But very soon he become the canon of orthodoxy, and no advance could be made except by showing the falsehood of what he had said. Galileo could not induce professors of astronomy to look through his telescope at Jupiter's moons, because they knew from Aristotle that Jupitar has no rooms. Throughout Galileo's life, he was as much criticized for disagreeing with Aristotle as for his supposed conflict with the scriptures.

Two centuries later, when Darwin published Origin of species he was met by dogmatic assertion of Aristotle is doctrine that each species was separately created. In logic and aesthetics his influence has been, and still is, exceedingly pernicious.
